LONDON-PARIS

Eye-to-Eye on Europe's Future

PARIS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath, after hours of secret talks, proclaimed Thursday night that France and Britain are in broad agreement on the future of Europe.

On the central issue of British entry into the European common market, Heath expressed belief that the way will shortly be cleared "for a momentous step forward."

Through the day they had conferred on the future organization, aims and role of Europe in the world.

High French sources said France had made a historic shift and was resolved to let Britain join the common market. They added some tough issues still have to be ironed out.

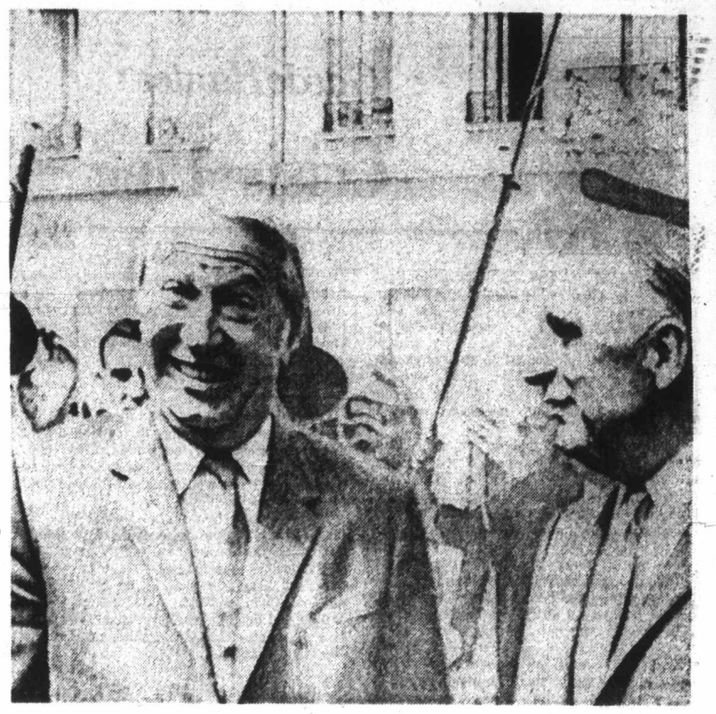

The British were twice barred from membership in the market by French vetoes in the 1960s.

Pompidou told a glittering banquet of French and British ministers and diplomats that "on many essential points, and particularly concerning the general concept of Europe, its organization and objectives, our views are sufficiently close to allow us to continue without pessimism."

In his response, Heath said it was heartening "for me to discover in my talks with the president how close are our ideas and aspirations."

Both leaders stressed key issues relating to the terms of British entry into an enlarged market remain to be settled by negotiators representing the six member states and the four applicant countries. The six are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. The applicants are Britain, Norway, Denmark and Ireland. They are due to meet next

N-Arms Curb Pledge Opening Way to Pact

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union Thursday announced a highly promising advance toward curbing nuclear arms, joining in a "declaration of intent" to agree to limit defensive missiles and some offensive strategic weapons.

President Nixon went on national television — while a similar statement was being made in Moscow — to disclose to Americans this "major step in breaking the stalemate on nuclear arms talks." He cautioned, however, that "intensive negotiations" remain before the new understanding is translated into a concrete agreement.

● Nixon didn't use S.A.L.T. news to sway NATO cut vote. Page 42.

The Soviet-American statement can nonetheless be viewed as halfway toward a deal since, as Nixon said, it "expresses the commitment of the Soviet and American governments at the highest level to achieve this goal."

Should the great expectations raised by the two nations be crushed for some reason, the recriminations that would follow could easily usher in a new cold war.

Among the subjects that will be intensively pursued now at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, major ones will be which offensive weapons systems to limit and by how much, as well as how to restrict antiballistic missiles and their ancillary radar.

Despite the formidable problems these questions involve, White House officials said they hoped for a full-scale agreement this year.

"If we succeed," the president said, "this joint statement that has been issued today may well be remembered as the beginning of a new era."

In effect, the declaration was a political decision to expedite the 19-month-old S.A.L.T. discussions by narrowing their focus to those particular weapons systems on which agreement seems most easily reached. Neither side will give up basic principles, but the more difficult issues will be left to subsequent negotiations.

Trudeau Plumps For Spirit Of Independence

By JOHN BEST

KIEV (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau opened a tour of the Soviet provinces in this Ukrainian capital Thursday after winding up a three-day Moscow visit with a show of international independence.

Trudeau, first Canadian prime minister to visit the Soviet Union, plumped at a Moscow news conference for a free Canadian spirit in foreign affairs and took a whimsical poke at his hosts as a point of emphasis.

The prime minister told reporters the Soviet-Canadian protocol agreement on consultations, signed by Trudeau and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin Wednesday, would help Canada formulate its own independent viewpoint on international questions, essential if Canada is to be an "informed participant" in its two major Western alliances.

He said he saw no conflict between the agreement and Canadian membership in the NATO and NORAD alliances.

Regular Consultations

Trudeau said the protocol document, which provides for regular consultations between the two countries on international issues as well as on questions affecting matters of mutual Soviet-Canadian concern, indicates that Canada still pursues its long-standing goal of independence in foreign affairs.

"I see no reason why anyone should worry about it in one direction or the other," he said.

And, polishing up his words with prompt application, the Liberal prime minister said he had not been asked to carry any messages from the Soviet Union to United States leaders concerning military forces levels in Europe, "and if they had asked me I would have said they could peddle their own papers."

In Kiev, the prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau arrived at an airport bedecked with the Canadian and Soviet flags and covered with posters proclaiming in English, French, Russian and Ukrainian:

'Long Live Friendship'

"Long live friendship between the peoples of the Soviet Union and Canada."

The Tass agency said the Canadian party was met by Vladimir Shcherbitsky, chairman of the Ukrainian council of ministers, and other officials. Tass said crowds came to greet Trudeau but gave no estimate of their size.

The prime minister and his wife then left the airport in a motorcycle-escorted motorcade for a drive through the flag-decorated streets of Kiev.

Trudeau is scheduled to continue his 12-day Soviet tour Saturday in Tashkent, the largest city in Soviet Central Asia, then go to Samarkand, Norilsk, Murmansk and Leningrad.

At his Moscow news conference, Trudeau described the Soviet-Canadian agreement as "extremely important and significant."

Goyer

Goyer Warns Against Prison Riots:

Behave, or No Penal Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday he is not going to reform Canada's penal system if prisoners don't behave responsibly.

The minister spoke to reporters after having been under fire in the Commons following an overnight disturbance at Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick.

Meanwhile, Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy told the judicial committee Thursday that 18 prisoners have been transferred from the Millhaven penitentiary in Ontario because "trouble was brewing again."

Of the 18, 11 were sent to Kingston penitentiary and seven to Collins Bay, Faguy added.

● Results of probe into Maritime prison row won't be made public. Page 40.

Goyer said prisoners wouldn't help their cause by creating disturbances.

Reforms can be introduced in an orderly fashion, he said.

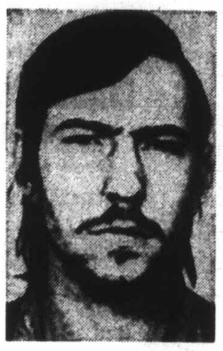

"... I'm not going to take the risk of moving into reform if the inmates are not able to behave like responsible people."

The government's line of action would not be determined by the prisoners, but by the government itself.

In the Commons, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) sought leave, refused by Liberals, to move that the Commons justice committee look into Goyer's role in the recent riot at Kingston penitentiary.

Peters said the inquiry

Simard Gets Life Term For Murder of Laporte

MONTREAL (CP) — Francis Simard, 23-year-old student, was sentenced Thursday to life imprisonment after being found guilty of non-capital murder in the strangulation death of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's labor minister at the time.

The 12-man jury returned a guilty verdict after three hours of deliberation.

Simard said nothing when the verdict was brought in and Mr. Justice Alphonse Barbeau pronounced the mandatory life sentence.

But he shouted "beautiful Alphonse" to the judge as he was led from the courtroom, and "we will win" to the audience.

Simard was also given a four-month sentence for contempt of court.

Laporte was murdered last Oct. 17, seven days after being kidnapped by the terrorist Quebec Liberation Front.

Another kidnap victim, British diplomat James Cross, was released unharmed Dec. 4, two months after the abduction.

Also convicted of murder and sentenced to life in the Laporte kidnapping was Paul Rose, a 27-year-old teacher. Two other men are awaiting trial.

Through most of the three-week trial, Simard made few objections to crown evidence and conducted no cross-examination of crown witnesses. It took only 20 minutes to swear in the 12-man jury.

Simard earned his four contempt citations as Barbeau rejected three of his petitions. He asked for better working facilities and permission to sit with three lawyers who were advising but not representing him. He was cited for contempt for a comment he made after it was rejected.

He presented a motion declining the jurisdiction of the court on the grounds it represented a regime installed in Quebec by violence. When an explanation of the rejection of this motion was refused, Simard insulted the judge and earned a second citation.

A third citation came as a motion claiming the jury panel was illegal, discriminatory and unconstitutional was also rejected.

The fourth contempt citation came after he commented:

"This is goddamn fine justice."

Harassing In Past Says Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday there is an "understanding" that Canadian fishing vessels will not be harassed again by the U.S. Coast Guard in disputed territory off the Alaska Panhandle.

Canada's Washington embassy delivered a formal note of protest to the U.S. government in Washington Wednesday after the Canadian fishing vessel Anthony J. was chased by a Coast Guard cutter on Sunday. Sharp was asked by Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) in the Commons whether Canadian patrols would protect Canadian fishermen in the area.

Prisoner Gouges Own Eyes

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The son of a prominent Massachusetts legislature counsel gouged out his eyeballs with his fingers in a jail cell Thursday while under the influence of a powerful animal tranquilizer, police said.

Charles Innis Jr., 25, took the tranquilizer sometime before he was found wandering in the nude Wednesday night and arrested, police said.

Lawrence Overby, turnkey at the jail, found Innis after seeing blood on the floor of the cell.

Violence Score: 24-8-75

MONTREAL (CP) — Eight policemen and more than 24 demonstrators were taken to hospital Thursday night following a violent clash at the outset of an anti-war demonstration.

A further 75 demonstrators were in police cells after an attack made on police barriers by persons wielding two-by-fours.

The clash took place shortly after a crowd of between 300 and 500 demonstrators set out for the United States consulate

$1.2 Million Awarded In Forest Blaze Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. was awarded $1,213,669 in damages Thursday in a judgment against B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and a provincial highways department foreman.

The award, for damages incurred by a 6,400-acre forest fire on Vancouver Island in 1967, was made by Mr. Justice G. S. Rae of the B.C. Supreme Court following a 45-day trial.

The judge held that Hydro and one of its foremen, Basil Van Horne, was 65 per cent to blame for the fire and department of highways foreman Alex Brayden, 35 per cent.

The court was told the forest fire started Aug. 16, 1967 when highways crews were blasting for a road realignment adjacent to MacMillan Bloedel timber land. It burned until September.

The devastated area was in a five-mile-by-two-mile area on Taylor River in the Sproat Lake district of the Island.

The fire, the judge ruled, was caused when blasting loosened a Hydro power line on a pole in the centre of the area being worked, the line hitting special pole guy wires, the ends of which had been left lying in tinder-dry forest bed after being wrapped around stumps.

Rae held that both the Hydro foremen and the highways department foreman were negligent.

Britain, France Eye to Eye

month in Luxembourg and Brussels.

Earlier, authoritative French sources reported Pompidou had taken the basic political decison to restore the old British - French informal understanding known as the Entente Cordiale and permit Britain's entry into the market.

Pompidou held out the vision of a united West Europe economically strong enough to rival the superpowers.

"Even more," the president continued, "our association would allow us to recover a purely European concept of civilization . . . which gives first place to mankind."

Pompidou and Heath imposed a news blackout on their exchanges in the presidential study in Elysee Palace.

British sources went no further than to say the atmosphere was one of relaxed friendliness.

The president and prime minister were said to have swapped ideas first about the sort of Europe each wants. Then they were said to have discussed the role a united Western Europe could play in the world.

Later Pompidou and Heath outlined the parliamentary situation each faces on the question of Common Market enlargement. Heath expects fierce resistance within his own Conservative party, and within the opposition Labor party, on the matter of British entry.

Outside Elysee Palace, senior French authorities uninhibitedly discussed their government's approach:

- Their president, as they see it, has taken the basic political decision that will permit British entry.
- Precise terms and time will be matters for the Brussels negotiators who, they expect, will be under the spur of the agreement-in-principle emerging here.
- Pompidou still may be expected to resist certain British demands that would give Britain a position of permanent privilege within the community, now made up of Belgium, France, West Germany, Luxembourg, Italy and The Netherlands. These would include preserving a special, independent international role for the pound sterling, and safeguards for Commonwealth producers at the expense of those within the community.

Arms Curb Pledge

The expectation among informed sources was that the deal being aimed at will cover ABM's and at least land-based missiles among the range of offensive weapon systems. Long-range bombers would be excluded and perhaps so would submarine-based missiles.

Eliminating aircraft in general would put aside a problem that has, more than any other, bedeviled the S.A.L.T. discussions for a year — what to do about U.S. forward-based aircraft in Europe and on carriers that can hit Russia with nuclear weapons despite their shorter range.

The Soviets want these aircraft limited in any broad deal on all offensive weapons.

The U.S. has refused to discuss them, ostensibly because they are "tactical" rather than "strategic," but really because the NATO alliance would fear deterioration of the U.S. nuclear umbrella and because the U.S. potential for intervening in the mideast might be curtailed.

The positive thrust now given the S.A.L.T. negotiations will have an effect on other issues being negotiated with the Soviet Union, according to White House officials.

In particular, they pointed out that a good effect can be expected on the anticipated East-West talks for a mutual cutback of forces across the Iron Curtain since they, like S.A.L.T. are complementary arms-control issues.

Crisis Line

WHEN IT COMES right down to it, I think the people I really admire most in this haphazard old world, are those who help others without thought of public praise or income tax deduction.

I offer you approximately 100 volunteers who can never hope for any personal recognition simply because in their line of help, they must of necessity remain anonymous.

They are the men and women, aged 17 to 60, who man the telephones at "Need," which is Victoria's fledgling crisis line. They are from all walks of life, they have rather effectively bridged the generation gap because of a common cause — to help people in trouble.

The problems are many and varied. Legal questions, aged, hungry, cold, lonely people in need of attention, people with depressions, people hooked on drugs or alcohol, people with sexual problems.

The volunteers are quick to point out that they do not have all the answers. They try to refer the callers to their family doctors, to lawyers and to the recognized community agencies.

"Each individual problem is important," an attractive young volunteer told me. "Each person needs somebody to talk with."

Like a shoulder to cry on, a crutch to lean on until a wheelchair can be found.

They man the phones day and night and some of the shifts can be exhausting. They've been in business one week and in that first week, handled more than 100 calls.

No pay, no recognition, just a lot of coffee, sore ears and a lot of satisfaction that comes from helping others.

The phone number is 386-6323. Mark it down, keep it in a handy place for the time you might need a friend on the other end of the phone.

THE RENAMING of Victoria area streets has brought about a fair amount of discussion.

Discussion, for example, as to why Amor De Cosmos has never been honored with the naming of a street in his memory. Well, Amor De Cosmos, who founded this newspaper, will be so honored. A street in the vicinity of the new Colonist building will be changed to Amor De Cosmos Street when the building is finished . . .

I AM INDEBTED to Isabelle Harland for her compilation of some interesting Royal Tour statistics. An admitted monarchist, Isabelle Harland took a fair amount of umbrage at those who criticized the visit and the royal family.

Her figures show it was no soft time for them. In approximately nine days, the Queen and Prince Philip were on "duty" for a total of 83 hours — the longest stretch being 12½ hours on May 5. She also points out this total did not include many more hours flying, sailing and driving between visits. No matter how you slice it, a fair amount of work for the royal family . . .

POLICE salaries. Should the local police forces get 15 per cent pay hikes? Should they achieve parity with Vancouver policemen?

I am well acquainted with the work done by policemen and yes, I think they are worth as much or more than plumbers, electricians and newspapermen. But I do not think a 15 per cent pay boost is practical at this time of rising taxes in all our communities. It is, I think, simple economics — the communities are strapped, have their backs to the wall.

Take Oak Bay for example. The tax base of Oak Bay is mainly residential — the community has no great amount of business tax base and certainly, no industry. Parity with Vancouver? Economics suggest it is not feasible.

A small sampling of public opinon shows about an equal split for and against such a heavy raise at this time . . .

should be held in view of evidence of continuing disturbances among prisoners from Kingston, now at Millhaven penitentiary, and Dorchester, N.B.

Peters also cited criticism of Goyer by Prof. Desmond Morton of Toronto, a lawyer who mediated between the prisoners at Kingston and officials last month when guards were held hostage for four days.

The trouble at Dorchester developed Wednesday night as about 230 prisoners attended a movie in the prison's gymnasium.

David MacDonald (PC — Egmont) pressed for a full public inquiry into the prison system in view of an "alarming number of incidents."

Goyer replied the prisoners will gain nothing from violence and disorder. This would only delay a reform program that had been announced before the Kingston disturbances April 14-18.

MacDonald asked whether this meant there would be no public scrutiny of the prison disturbances.

Goyer said the government doesn't need "disorder" to decide policy.

David Orlikow (NDP — Winnipeg North) said that only Tuesday Goyer had told the justice committee everything was fine at Dorchester.

Goyer denied saying this, adding that he had no crystal ball.

Faguy said the 18 prisoners in Ontario are being held in dissociation cells — the modern equivalent of solitary confinement.

Faguy refused to confirm for Orlikow a report that seven of the prisoners had been told they would be charged with murder in connection with the deaths of two prisoners in last month's uprising at Kingston penitentiary.

Most of the prisoners in Millhaven were taken there from Kingston, where the cell blocks were destroyed in the four-day demonstration.

Pollution Control Blamed for Cut

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. blamed the high cost of pollution control as it announced cancellation Thursday of a multi-million-dollar expansion program.

Although high construction costs and prospective operating costs also were cited, the cost of meeting government anti-pollution standards was given as the main reason for dropping plans for a new sulphuric acid plant and expansion of an iron ore plant.

The company's decision halts current or planned construction worth more than $48 million but will not result in any layoffs. About 150 construction workers now employed on the iron ore plant project will be absorbed into other projects. A company statement said the cancelled projects, in additipn to their value as commercial operations, were to have helped meet provincial demands for control of sulphur dioxide emissions.

The acid plant would have manufactured sulphuric acid from sulphur left-over from the iron ore process.

Instead, the pollution standards, will be met by a "moderate decrease" in iron ore production. Affected employees are to be absorbed into other operations.

The acid plant was to have cost an estimated $33 million. The compnay declined to disclose cost figures for the iron ore paint.

Construction of two water-cooling towers and ammonia-extraction equipment would have cost an additional $15 million.

Fischer Near Victory

VANCOUVER (CP) — The third chess game between Bobby Fischer of Los Angeles and Mark Taimanov of the Soviet Union in a quarter-final elimination round to determine a challenger for the world chess championship was adjourned Thursday.

It was scheduled to be continued today, along with the second game adjourned Wednesday.

At Thursday's adjournment, on the 42nd move, Taimanov was in a hopeless position. His king was in check by Fischer's queen, which simultaneously was attacking a bishop.

Rubella's Dangers

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Should a woman who uses an effective method of birth control be given German measles vaccine?

If given the vaccine, how long should she avoid pregnancy?

Should she take the vaccine even though a possibility exists that she has had German measles but isn't sure?—P. B. M.

Dear Doctor: I was recently given German measles vaccine. How long should I avoid pregnancy?—G.

It is the hope that by thorough campaigns of vaccinating children (from one year old to puberty) against rubella (German measles) we can prevent epidemics.

The disease is mild; unfortunately, when it is contracted by a woman early in her pregnancy, it becomes devastating to the unborn child.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

If we can effectively stamp out the disease entirely, that will be a blessing — but meantime what of women of child-bearing age? Can they be vaccinated, too? Yes, but only under proper circumstances.

First, it should be established whether the woman has had German measles. If she doesn't know, this can be determined by what is called the H-I test, which will show whether rubella antibodies are present in the blood. If there are, then she has had the disease and does not need to be vaccinated.

If not, then she can be vaccinated — but only when there is positive evidence she is not already pregnant.

Why? Because in early pregnancy, the vaccination can cause birth defects, just as the disease does. I have been shocked at letters from women who have been given the vaccine without a pregnancy test. For sometimes we then get the sad cry, "I didn't know I was pregnant at the time!"

Finally, a woman getting such vaccination should be warned to take the strictest precautions against becoming pregnant for at least two and preferably three months, after which the danger period for her will be past.

Should a woman who uses effective birth control measures be given the vaccine? I would say it should be given only to such women.

Examine 'Fortune'

LONDON (AP) — Several members of Parliament demanded Thursday an investigation into Queen Elizabeth's "vast private fortune."

The request came first from Labor MP John Grant after Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, had announced the names of the members of a "select committee" which will consider increasing the queen's official salary.

Hours After U.S.-Soviet Parley

Lobstermen See Red Again

BOSTON (AP) — Two American lobster boats reported Thursday that Soviet fishing vessels were endangering their boats and damaging their gear only hours after the commander of the Soviet fishing fleet and a United States delegation met to discuss similar complaints.

Gene White, an executive of the Prelude Corp., said the Pat-San-Marie radioed at dawn Thursday that she and the Wily Fox were being harassed by the Russians.

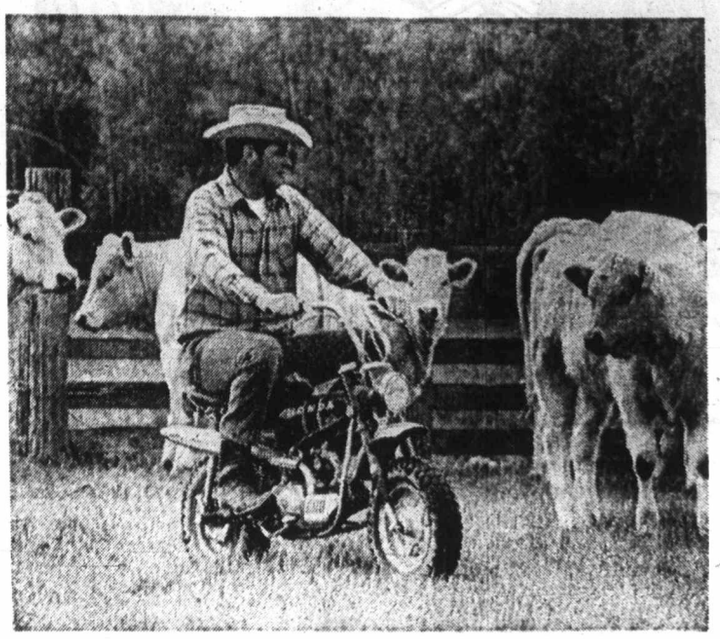

"Many Russian trawlers were zig-zagging various courses at various speeds, deliberately destroying our gear." White said. The crews of the two ships were "too busy trying to stay out of the way to even attempt to protect the gear."

The U.S. Coast Guard reported at mid-day that the cutter Active, which was at the scene through Wednesday night, had not observed on its radar any interference by foreign vessels.

The visibility in the area was about 100 feet in heavy fog, but White said visibility was not an issue because of sophisticated equipment used by the fishing fleets.

"If they (the Soviets) have equipment that can track a school of fish, they can surely see our gear," he said.

He said the two Prelude boats had contacted the Russians by radio to warn them they were approaching American gear, but the harassment continued.

Red Sentences of Jews 'Distortion of Justice'

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Leningrad court convicted nine Jewish men Thursday and sentenced them to terms ranging from one to 10 years in prison camps for their roles in an attempted airplane hijacking and anti-Soviet agitation, Tass agency said.

The defendants can appeal the sentences which were ordered carried out under "strict regime" — the medium degree of three types of prison camp sentences which pertains to the kind of labor performed, mail and visiting privileges and other conditions of life.

The sentences fulfilled the demands of the prosecution almost exactly. The three-man "collegium," combining the functions of judge and jury, handed down its verdict after a day of deliberation in the 10-day trial.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban charged the sentences were "a complete distortion of justice and truth."

"Basically, the defendants were not being tried for the hate of the Soviet Union but for the love of Israel," Eban said. "There was nothing in their hearts, no intention whatsoever, to hurt the administration of the regime of the Soviet Union."

Absorption Minister Nathan Peled, charged with responsibility for migrants to Israel, termed the sentences "illegal.

The sentencing ended Round 2 in the prosecution of more than 30 Soviet Jews arrested last June when police broke up an attempt by 12 persons to hijack an airliner, presumably to Sweden, as a first step toward emigration to Israel.

Tory Policy Paper:

Canadian Print Media Purvey Continentalism

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative policy paper released Thursday charges that Canadian newspapers often act as conscious or unconscious purveyors of continentalism by frequently reflecting American views.

Th paper, one of several for discussion at a party policy convention in the fall, sets forth proposals on Canadian sovereignty and identity.

It calls for far-reaching government measures to assist Canadian newspapers, periodicals and broadcasting. A national periodicals development corporation is suggested.

The paper also proposes increased government regulation of foreign investment in Canada.

Four objectives for a Canadian cultural policy are:

- Encouragement of vehicles of expression that can make contributions to the Canadian culture.
- Maintenance of Canadian ownership and content in particular cultural areas.
- Promotion of diversity of opinion.
- Increased understanding among Canadians of all origins.

The Canadian print media come in for rough treatment: "A very large proportion of the feature items of Canadian newspapers is American; a great many syndicated columns of opinion are American; reports of international developments come directly or indirectly from American news agencies; and editorial policy very frequently reflects American views and acts as conscious or unconscious purveyors of continentalism."

The Road to Recovery

THE LATEST STATEMENT by Finance Minister Edgar Benson in regard to economic policies is enough to take the heart out of the country. He has dashed even the faintest of hopes that new routes were being mapped towards at least a measure of stability. Next month's budget obviously is going to be more of the same inflation-unemployment nourishment.

"It would be the height of folly," says Mr. Benson, "to conclude the government plans any major changes in its economic policies just because of the unexpected sharp rise in unemployment last month."

He insists that a healthier economy is in the offing through a continuing policy of deficit budgetting and huge public spending, noting that it takes time to get results.

But the country was doing better when Mr. Benson was not trying to get results. A year ago, when the government was concentrating on containing inflation, the unemployment rate was 6.6 while last month it went to 7.8 per cent of the 8.3 million labor force.

And despite what the prime minister has said, inflation is far from being beaten either.

The policies of the national government have not worked and there is little evidence in sight that they will work even after the "time lag" that Mr. Benson says is required.

The "lag" has been lasting for too long. How many more Canadians will have to be unemployed before the government will admit that things cannot be allowed to become worse before they get better?

Could it be that in a false feeling of security it will allow the economy to wobble further off balance before taking the brakes off business by granting major tax cuts which would permit the planning of growth upon which prosperity and full employment ultimately rests?

Might it be holding back, for reasons of political advantage, on this more realistic approach to what is fast reaching the crisis stage? Substantial reductions in taxes might offer the Liberal regime more in the way of rewards if made at a time when a general election was closer at hand.

If that is Ottawa thinking, the timing is out. If there is another year of high unemployment together with a slackness in national production, it is unlikely that anything the government might do later will help it to any extent at the 1972 polls.

Conditions are such that the time for policy change is now. Immediacy is the country's need.

"Now for your information, Mr. Benson — THIS is a downward trend . . ."

African Misadventure

IT IS INTERESTING to note that the former president of Uganda, Dr. Milton Obote, upon whose anti-British pronouncements Prime Minister Trudeau and the Canadian delegation seemed to place such weight during the Commonwealth conference, is now a wanted criminal with a price on his head.

The fact that the present official — and recognized — regime of Uganda has offered a reward of nearly $180,000 to anyone who will bring Dr. Obote back to Uganda alive to face charges of murder and plots to kill all senior army officers not of the Acholi or Lango tribes probably will make little impact on the Canadian public.

What might concern many Canadians, however, is the fact that it was Dr. Obote who was singled out of all African leaders for special treatment and close consultations by Mr. Trudeau during the Singapore meetings.

The impression bruited abroad at that time was that Canada had outsmarted all the other non-African Commonwealth nations by getting first-hand — and perhaps even secret — information on the African scene direct from an influential and knowledgeable African leader.

Dr. Obote's expertise, it was hinted, would be invaluable to Mr. Trudeau and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp when the time came for them to decide on what course Canada would follow in Africa.

Of course they did not know that even at that time Dr. Obote was neither influential nor knowledgeable. Neither did they know that within a matter of days he would not even be a leader or that in a matter of weeks he would be listed in his own country as a vicious criminal.

And certainly neither Mr. Trudeau nor Mr. Sharp can be held to blame for this. What they can be blamed for, however, is making Canada a Commonwealth laughing stock by playing politics in Africa.

Perhaps similar embarrassments can be avoided in future if Mr. Trudeau and his cabinet colleagues learn to rely on Canada's own professional overseas representatives for advice on foreign affairs instead of attempting to garner it through the application of Canadian-style backyard political tactics whenever they are away from home.

Ottawa Comment

Canada Needs Big Tax Cuts

By LUBOR J. ZINK

THE Trudeau government expects the unemployment rate to drop to a "tolerable level" this year.

Dr. Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada (a government-established advisory body on long-term economic trends) is far less optimistic. In his opinion, a relatively high level of unemployment is likely to persist through 1971.

When he launched his anti-inflation crusade, Prime Minister Trudeau stated that he was prepared to accept an unemployment rate of 6 per cent, and perhaps a bit more, to achieve his deflationary objectives. Dr. Smith regards anything above 4 per cent as too high.

In recent months, the number of jobless exceeded 8 per cent of the labor force and by nose count still hovers around that figure. But the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate (i.e., the annual average of the worst and the best months) now stands at 6 per cent. Using his own yardstick, Mr. Trudeau can conceivably call this "tolerable"; using the Economic Council's critieria, Dr. Smith has to call it "relatively high."

The semantics of the two assessments is unimportant. What really matters is that around 600,000 job-seekers are not likely to find work even during the best months of this year and that with so many able-bodied adults idle, the economy cannot advance within sight of its production capacity, let alone potential.

This in turn means that, apart from the psychological damage that high unemployment inflicts on the community, our total national product will continue to be considerably smaller than it could be if we managed to use our available human and material resources more intelligently. Moreover, a good portion of that smaller-than-attainable total product will have to be used for supporting those who seek but cannot find work.

The shortfall between the actual and potential value of the national product, directly attributable to the less-than-optimal use of available resources and production capacity, is estimated at between three and five billion dollars a year. Coupled with the steep rise in expenditure on welfare, which is necessitated by high unemployment and which does not create productive jobs, that's a tremendous loss.

The worst feature of this sorry situation is that it is self-perpetuating, for the funds diverted from productive to non-produtive use (i.e., from expansion of the economic base to welfare) do not help reduce unemployment. They cushion the plight of the jobless but also reduce their chances of finding work, because the money spent on relief is not available for job-creating investment.

This simple fact tends to be overlooked by people who see remedy in wholesale nationalization of the means of production, distribution and exchange.

Nationalization is a political and administrative measure which does not in itself create a single additional productive job. Nor does it generate investment capital for economic growth.

What it does, as can be seen in the so-called "people's democracies" which put it into effect, amounts to replacement of the market system with central planning of all economic activity which is predicted on, and cannot exist without, a totalitarian political structure.

In such a system, unemployment is "solved" by slave-labor camps and by pauperizing wages for the rest of the regimented labor force. The result, apart from unshakable political tyranny, is destruction of economic incentives and personal initiative.

In the absence of incentives and competition, both the quality and quantity of work deteriorates. Seeing no escape from the clutches of the bureaucratic machinery of the all-powerful one-party state which is the sole employer, people do as little as they can get away with. The economy in such a system, even though claiming full employment, runs at a fraction of its capacity and provides a standard of living no worker in the "capitalist" countries would willingly accept.

This, of course, is no reason for accepting high unemployment in the market economy system which, when properly managed, provides the framework for both material well-being and political and individual freedom. The examples of such countries as Switzerland, Western Germany and Japan, which have no unemployment problems, show what a good management of the market economy can do.

According to Dr. Smith's calculations, Canada's economy would need to grow for three to four years at a steady rate of at least 6.5 per cent to reduce our rate of unemployment to four per cent. The present growth rate, in real terms, is less than half of what Dr. Smith reckons is needed.

While some improvement in the growth rate can be expected as a result of the Trudeau government's abandonment of its misconceived deflationary policies, a major boost is necessary to accelerate and amplify the upturn. The government could and should provide a substantial portion of the needed boost by tax cuts designed to spur productive investment.

To Stimulate Home Production

Hungary Swells Trade with the West

By LESLIE COLITT from Budapest

THE streets of Budapest and other Hungarian cities reflect the economic changes that have taken place here over the past three years.

Food stores and delicatessens — the best stocked in Eastern Europe — offer French cognac and wines, Colombian coffee, Dutch chocolate and East and West German Schnapps. Shop windows display Japanese radios beside Hungarian ones and West German electric shavers next to East German types.

This variety of goods — much of it purchased with chronically scarce Western currencies — is a key aspect of Hungary's ambitious economic reform program begun in 1968. The idea is to stimulate Hungarian factories, by direct competition with the products of the West, to produce what consumers want.

In a number of cases the results have been a marked improvement in the quality and availability of domestic consumer goods. When Wilkinson and Gillette Razor blades were introduced into Hungary, they nearly drove conventionally-produced Hungarian blades off the market. Soon, however, a Hungarian blade equal to the Western product was developed and sold at a cheaper price than the imports. A similar story repeated itself with toothpaste and a dozen other items of daily use.

The shop window displays, however, are not the only reason thousands of Hungarian city-dwellers swarm through the streets at night and fill restaurants and cafes to capacity. A critical housing shortage continues to make it impossible for young married couples even to hope for their own flat. A night out means escape from overcrowding at home.

The government has decided to raise the previous rock-bottom rents by up to 250 per cent in July. This highest figure applies to the top category of flats with running hot and cold water, toilet and kitchen — virtual luxuries in Hungary. Rents for basic housing will not be touched. The measure is meant to correct a situation in which well-to-do Hungarians were hardly paying more rent than factory and office workers.

In addition, the government has provided greater incentives to the construction industry and is offering low interest loans to families who want to buy flats. All this, however, is bringing scant relief in a country where young couples eagerly study the newspaper obituary columns to seek out a widow or widower they can care for in return for a place to live.

One effect of the economic reforms — called the new economic mechanism — has been a great spurt in Hungary's trade with the West. It has been faster, in fact, than the growth of the country's trade with other Eastern European countries over the past two years. Hungarian foreign trade officials are candid about the reason.

One official said:

"We asked our trading partners in the CMEA (Council for Mutual Economic Assistance) for increases in their exports of many categories of consumer goods to us. But they weren't able to deliver more than the amount specified in the long-term trade agreement they had with us, so we have turned to the West."

Hungarian economic journals openly publish figures showing that trade among the developed capitalist countries amounts to 72 per cent of world trade, commenting that "the weight of the Socialist countries in world trade has not changed appreciably in recent years."

Behind such outspokenness lies considerable dissatisfaction among Hungarian planners and economists with the functioning of Eastern Europe's economic union.

They bemoan the absence of convertible currencies which leads to a country piling up East German marks, Czechoslovak kronas or Soviet roubles that cannot be applied to its trade with another East European land. They criticize the tendency of the most developed CMEA countries — East Germany and Czechoslovakia — to regard less-developed member nations as a "captive market" for industrial products which frequently are obsolescent by Western standards.

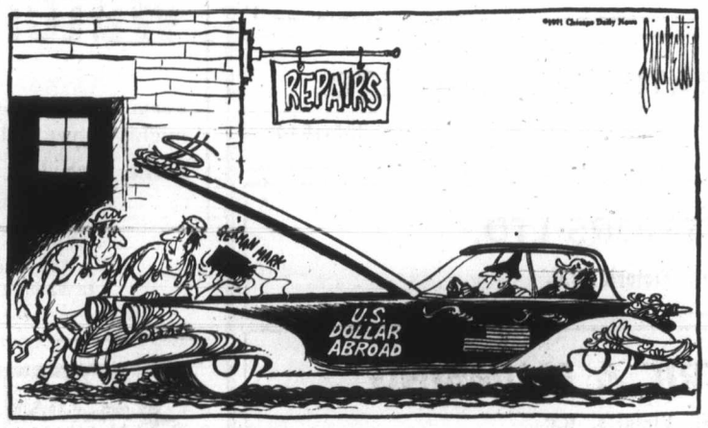

For this reason, Hungary's trade with its East European allies has dropped to 65 per cent, and trade with advanced Western countries now makes up 26 per cent of total foreign commerce. Exports to West Germany alone soared by 15 per cent last year and imports from West Germany by 38 per cent. Although Hungary's trade with East Germany still makes up 10 per cent of total imports and exports, trade with West Germany now has reached the 5 per cent level and is likely to expand faster than that with East Germany.

The Hungarians have great hopes for so-called co-operation agreements with Western countries which involve Western companies providing Hungarian firms with advanced technology to produce goods which are then marketed in the West. Hungary's asset here is a large reservoir of workers, many of whom it is trying to divert from marginally productive industries into growth industries such as electronics and artificial fibres.

★ ★ ★

In their commerical dealings with the West, the Hungarians, like the Poles and Czechoslovaks, are keenly aware of a great barrier in the way of expansion. The overwhelming portion of their production is geared to markets in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. These are large and secure markets but the level of technology required to supply them is considerably lower than in the West. Trying to achieve a breakthrough into the dreamed-of computer era under these conditions is a problem they will have to grapple with for years to come.

The Moscow Film Festival In Progressive Decline

By DEV MURARKA from Moscow

PREPARATIONS are well in hand for the seventh Moscow film festival in August, and last week the second congress of cinematographic workers was held, with the usual inordinately long speeches which are the hallmark of any Soviet public occasion.

The Soviet film industry is to a great extent controlled by those who view films, and all other artistic creations, for their utility as a weapon of propaganda rather than for their artistic content. If artistic excellence reveals itself it seems to cause no end of worry to the authorities, as if a major sin has been committed in the studios, and everybody around is made uncomfortable, if not worse.

A case in point, and a consequence of such attitudes, is the treatment meted out to Andrei Rublev, which has been held by critics to be one of the best post-war Russian films. It is being shown in Paris, but the home audience does not get a chance to look at it.

Even so, a greater degree of freedom seems to be allowed to film directors than in some other creative media. This freedom is almost complete if they work on adaptation of literary classics, such as Dostoevsky's novels or Shakespeare's plays. They run into trouble, however, if they allow a too-free rein to their imagination and ignore set formulae. So novel treatment of any theme is exceptional. Classics apart, a heavy dose of moralizing can be detected in even the most successful of all recent Soviet films. A fairly large proportion of films relate to the Second World War. This incessant exploitation of the war theme has become something of an obsession in popular art forms here. The Russians want to remember and honor what was after all a great and tragic historic experience for them, and which caused immense suffering; but a sort of crude patriotism and rather stock, heroic characterization detracts from this aim. Moreover, these films revel excessively in violence and bloodshed.

While Soviet commentators are eager to mock and condemn the violence of Western screens, anyone who has watched Soviet television consistently, even for a week, cannot but be struck by the number of killings and heroic deeds of the Red Army. It is difficult not to imagine that even the Soviet audience must be satiated by now.

The trouble is that those who decree this kind of entertainment are very often people not even remotely connected with creative art. They are political bureaucrats trained to defend a particular ideological line.

This lack of experience in any kind of creative activity by those who censor and finally approve or disapprove, is reflected in their judgment. It does not help to produce good films. Both in technical terms and in human interest, contemporary Soviet films fail to rise to the great standards of Russia's own giants of the past, such as Eisenstein, Donskoi, Pudovkin and others. These names are of course still evoked with pride, but their example is not encouraged.

The same devotion to mediocrity seems to prevail in the Soviet approach to their own international film festival. The Moscow film festival is perhaps the only one where film-makers from Africa and Asia receive an equal chance to show their wares as others do. It is also true that many countries do not send their best films to Moscow because they find other film festivals more rewarding financially and in prestige. So the Russians have some cause to condemn the Western cinema's commercialism as well as political motives for not favoring Moscow with better-quality films. The Americans introduced a political element this year by refusing to send any entry because, in the last two Moscow Festivals, some North Vietnamese films received an award, and not surprisingly these films were anti-American in tone.

But the main reason why Moscow film festivals have progressively declined in prestige and value for the film world in general is because Moscow has failed to set any standard of excellence either in its choice of films or in its awards. Almost every entry, or at least every country, is given some kind of award or honorable mention. It may be good politics to award a third-rate Indian entry the consolation prize of the festival, but it does not convince others that the Moscow festival awards prizes completely on artistic merit. And the number of prizes is so great that it becomes meaningless for any film to claim a distinction.

As if to rub in that in Moscow everything must be judged by ideology rather than quality, a discussion on the theme "Cinematography in the struggle for social progress" is planned within the framework of the festival. Any country thinking of organizing yet another film festival should study and learn from this and other aspects of the Moscow manner how not to do it.

'Whoever Controls the Indian Ocean Dominates Asia'

Russia Paid Heed to Prophetic U.S. Admiral

"Whoever controls the Indian Ocean dominates Asia," wrote Admiral Alfred Mahan, the United States' most gifted naval strategist at the beginning of the modern era of sea power. "This ocean is the key to the Seven Seas. In the 21st century the destiny of the world will be decided on its waters."

Until the British started to move out, and the Russians to move in, no one in recent years paid much attention to the strategic possibilities of the Indian Ocean. Today, there is alarm in Peking, and at least moderate concern in Washington and London about the Russian Indian Ocean activities.

By DENIS WERNER, from Canberra

The worries, if they have any validity, are still long-term. Six years have passed since large numbers of Russian merchantmen, sailing between Odessa and Haiphong with military and other supplies for the North Vietnamese, began to appear in the Indian Ocean in large numbers.

Inevitably, this merchant marine activity was accompanied by some sort of naval presence. At first the Russian ships were mostly employed on meteorological missons. Then came the "trawlers," some of them legitimate, some equipped as spy ships.

★ ★ ★

In 1967 one warshp and about a dozen smaller vessels arrived to trace and recover space satellites. In 1968 Admiral Gorshkov, architect and commander in chief of the Russian navy, visited India to arrange for ports of call.

Today there is a constant presence of about 10 to 20 naval ships, including the occasional cruiser and nuclear or conventional submarine. Their presence is less surprising than their absence would be.

As a super-power, Russia became acutely conscious during the Cuban crisis of its naval inadequacy and its lack of capacity to exert important influence, military or otherwise, in areas remote from its shores.

Russian leaders did some serious rethinking about military priorities, the first hint of which was given by Admiral Gorshkov when he warned the "imperialist powers" that they would soon lose their supremacy on the sea.

He has been as good as his promise and today the Russian navy is second only to that of the United States. In submarines it is much stronger. While the United States has just over a hundred, of which 44 are nuclear-powered attack vessels, the Soviet Union has 290 conventially powered and 80 nuclear powered.

The Russian emphasis on submarines, like the general naval build-up, cannot be considered simply as the creation of a threat. Having decided that it needed a large navy, the Soviet Union then reached the decision that America's predominance in aircraft carriers could best be matched by other means.

The Russians either had to build carriers themselves and develop a major naval-air capability or go under water. They chose the latter course, and in this they were probably wise.

Rapid naval expansion also meant a rapidly expanding naval presence in waters where few Russian ships had been seen before. At first this became apparent with the expansion of the Atlantic fleet. Then came the appearance of a Russian fleet in the Mediterranean, hitherto the close preserve of the U.S. Sixth Fleet, and finally the Russian entry into the Indian Ocean.

That the British decided to pull in their East of Suez horns at the same time was merely coincidental. Given the combination of circumstances that I have described, the Russians would have come anyway.

The rift with China added impetus to the move. The Russians are vulnerable to Chinese attack east of Lake Baikal. As in the Russo-Japanese War of 1904-05, the Trans-Siberian Railway is too tenuous a supply route on which to base a major war effort. The sea route, and the countries bordering it, became more important than ever before.

★ ★ ★

The opening of the Suez Canal will be of primary importance to the Soviet Union since it will shorten the long trip from Odessa round the Cape of Good Hope by thousands of miles. Not surprisingly, therefore, Egypt, next to North Vietnam, has become the primary recipient of Russian aid. In the Arab world generally the Soviet Union is now the dominant foreign power.

Its influence extends all the way to the southern end of the Red Sea and eastward to the Persian Gulf. A Russian harbor master attends to the shipping in Aden, and Russian advisers are helping Yemenj guerrillas whose aim appears to be to gain control of the Persian Gulf oil.

By arrangement with the government of Southern Yemen, the Russians obtained permission to build a base on the island of Socotra, and there are said to be 500 Russian technicians at work there.

On the other side of the Red Sea, the Russians are building a new port at Berbera and have supplied the tiny Somali military force with what the Economist described as a "stunning volume" of weapons.

★ ★ ★

Maunitius has signed a fishing agreement with the Russians, and Russian trawlers, of the innocent and non-innocent variety, are constant visitors.

Ceylon has received the first of the MiG 17s promised by the Russians during the recent North Korean inspired left-wing revolution, and Russian technicians have arrived to train the air force.

Aid to India now runs third only to that given to Egypt and North Vietnam and has passed the billion dollar mark.

In Singapore and Kuala Lumpur the Russians have deliberately undercut the Malayan Communist Party, which is Peking inspired, and have worked hard, and successfully, to promote trade.

And the countries that have sought closer links with Moscow have been motivated by their own interests and have become involved with their eyes open. The Russian presence may well be some form of insurance against Chinese attempts to bring much of the region into its sphere of influence.

Yet, with all this, we would be blind if we did not appreciate that the changes in the Indian Ocean are part of the changes that are taking place in the world military balance.

Japan's oil supplies from the Persian Gulf may be in no danger because the Russians and the British are changing roles in the Indian Ocean. Malaysia may prove impervious to Russian hints, if and when they are made, to nationalize British investments in tin and rubber. Australia, short of a world war, is not likely to be isolated.

But, at a time when the British really do not count East of Suez, American policy in Asia after Vietnam has yet to be made clear, and China is throwing off its inhibitions and prejudices and plunging into the world, the Russians are not only willing but determined to move in.

Sadat Destroyed Nasser's Network

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Washington

The political purge just announced in Cairo is part of a de-Nasserification process which has been gathering force ever since Anwar Sadat became president after the death of Gamal Abdel Nasser last fall. Judging by what I saw in Cairo last month, Col. Sadat has a reasonable chance of making the changes stick.

But the effect of the changes on the conflict with Israel is not yet calculable. And no one who has recently seen the extent of Soviet penetration into Egyptian life can imagine that the Russians are about to be sent packing soon.

To understand what has happened, it is important to realize that at its end the Nasser regime was essentially an intelligence apparatus. Col. Nasser made the big decisions in foreign policy himself. Control over Egypt was exercised in his name by a network of faithful friends drawn chiefly from the Mohabarat, or military intelligence services.

At the heart of this system was Sami Sharaff, a former intelligence officer who co-ordinated all the dossiers from the post of minister to the president. His cousin, Gen. Mohammed Fawzi, was minister of war and boss of the Army.

Another intelligence officer, Sharawi Gomaa, ran the police as minister of interior. A third former intelligence officer, Vice-President Aly Sabry, ran Egypt's one political party, the Arab Socialist Union.

This whole group survived the death of Col. Nasser intact. As a screen for their control they put forward a popular military man long know (because of his supposed docility) as Bikbachi Sah, or Colonel Yes Sir. That was President Sadat.

Only once in power, President Sadat was no longer Colonel Yes Sir. He himself dispensed with the austere tone of his predecessor's role, moving, among other things, the official residence to a palace on the Nile.

Together with his prime minister, he began to emphasize the need for improving the life of ordinary Egyptians. With his foreign minister, he began disengaging Egypt from ties with Arab extremists which had previously inhibited any move towards peace.

This Egypt First policy found widespread support among many Egyptians who had been exhausted by the strenuous idealisms and the recurrent crises of the Nasser regime.

By early February it was clear that the easy tone set by President Sadat was eroding the climate of tension the ex-intelligence officers needed to make their rule indispensable. Sometime in April, they launched a challenge to the president's authority.

Col. Sadat reacted with vigor. He first removed the least popular of the old gang, Vice-President Aly Sabry. When that went down easily, he ousted the rest. The emphasis he put on bugging of homes and phones was a serving of notice to all the world that the whole intelligence crowd was through.

Their replacements seem to have as a chief characteristic loyalty to President Sadat. But on settlement with Israel, the new minister of war, Gen. Mohammed Ahmed Sadek, has been known for a tough stance. As chief of staff back in 1968, he proclaimed a state of emergency when Col. Nasser was out of the country.

It is significant that, on the eve of the purge, President Sadat said that his terms for reopening of the Suez Canal involved an Israeli pullback from the canal of 115 miles — which is much, much more than what the Israelis and Americans have in mind.

As to Soviet influence, attention lavished on missiles and planes has obscured something far more durable. That is the progressive Russian takeover of the modern sector of the Egyptian economy.

Cairo depends on Moscow for building and expanding its steel industry, for spreading the power being produced at the Aswan Dam across the country in a rural electrification program, for petrochemical works now abuilding, for civil air transport, and for purchase of that part of the cotton crop which doesn't get sold on the world market.

Put that together with naval facilities on the Mediterranean and control of Egypt's air defences, and the Russians have a presence that is not simply going to be blown away.

The sensible American policy in these circumstances is to move slowly, carefully, and discreetly. Some progress in the Near East has recently been made thanks to the realization that a step-by-step approach was far superior to a full-blown push for a total solution. There is no reason now to unlearn that lesson.

Troop Withdrawals Pitch New Variation of Old Ploy

By STEPHEN SCOTT

From United Nations

The Soviet Union, in making its pitch for troop withdrawals from Central Europe, is using a ploy that it has used with varying success over the years.

That ploy is the making of an attention-grabbing suggestion without giving any indication of how that suggestion can be implemented.

Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev put forward the proposal in a speech last week. The idea was pressed upon Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau in three days of official talks in Moscow this week.

Trudeau said Thursday that the Soviet idea must be "earnestly" considered. But he and other Canadian officials also tacitly put their finger on the weakness: At no time was Trudeau told in what forum or what manner troop withdrawals should be negotiated.

★ ★ ★

The Soviets and their allies have done this many times in the past.

They have called in recent years for a European security conference. But details of such a conference have been left in the air and the West has been left in the position of having to call for careful preparation before such a conference can take place.

At the United Nations, the Soviets and their friends have called for such seemingly worthwhile things as a Declaration of International Security, a definition of aggression and a document outlining peaceful co-existence.

All these looked great on paper and sounded good in speeches. But the West in each case found them little more than propaganda vehicles and years of work were required before some balanced approach was achieved.

★ ★ ★

In the case of a Declaration of International Security, proposed by the Soviets two years ago, Canada took a leading part in proposing that the West defuse this ploy. A balanced document, little more than a rewrite of the UN Charter, was approved at the last session of the General Assembly.

The Soviets played the troop-reduction theme well. They could be sure of world-wide publicity because of the debate in Washington on proposals to reduce the size of the American troop commitment in Europe.

They got further publicity because Trudeau, head of a government which already has reduced the size of its forces in Europe, was visiting Moscow.

Moscow must know the difficulties that troop reduction poses for President Nixon.

For it is all very well to have American troops and Soviet soldiers pulled back from Europe. But the Soviet troops would go to Russia and would have easy access to Europe, if necessary.

★ ★ ★

American troops would withdraw across the ocean and access would be more difficult.

There are many other factors.

The Soviets, aware of them, can be expected to press their point, realizing that it could be a long time before the nuts and bolts of the proposal will be discussed.

"One last question — how would you handle the student protest sit-in that would be inevitable on your appointment?

Huey Turns Pious

BERKELEY, Calif. — Black Panther minister of defence Huey Newton, in a speech on Malcolm X's birthday, may have signalled a surprising new turn for the militant party he helped found.

Newton said at a theological seminary that the party had been "arrogant" toward the church and the black community and mistaken in confrontations with police.

"All we got was a war and a lot of bloodshed," he said. Newton said the Panthers had fallen out of favor with the black community.

Newton said he went to church last Sunday for the first time in 10 years.

BIG DAY FOR GIRLS

Central Saanich's Miss Centennial will be chosen and crowned today during a ceremony in Brentwood Community Hall.

Spokesman Percy Lazarz of the Central Saanich Centennial Committee said Wednesday there will be six contestants. They are the finalists from the original 10 entrants.

He said the final round will consist of a two minute speech from each girl.

He said the crowning of the winner by Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith will be the high spot of a centennial variety show.

There will be a performance by the Claremont school choir under conductor Don Kyle.

The centennial school band, composed of representatives of the Saanich district high schools will also perform at the concert, which starts at 8 p.m.

The finalists are Lesley Barr, Sharon Bickford, Vickie Foerester, Marlene Johnson, Lynn Morrison, Serena Woods.

Loffmark Explains Care Move:

Estate Levy Conditional

B.C. has asked Ottawa to approve a scheme whereby some or all of the cost of care for patients who die in extended-care hospitals would be recovered from the deceased's estate, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark said Thursday.

Such action would, however, only be taken in cases where there was no spouse or dependent children, Loffmark said in an interview in which he clarified proposals he made in Vancouver Wednesday. A similar program was introduced last year in B.C. mental hospitals and the government has proposed an extension to the field of extended care.

Because extended-care is available at $1 a day to patients who receive 24-hour nursing care in public hospitals and non-profit institutions Ottawa, which shares the cost of the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service, must be party to any decision taken.

This wasn't necessary in the case of mental institutions because they don't come under the federal-provincial sharing agreement.

Loffmark said the request for federal approval of the extension of the program into the extended-care field was made in a letter to Health Minister John Munro about three weeks ago.

B.C. believes, Loffmark added, distant relatives or adult children who have contributed little or nothing to the maintenance of a patient in a public extended-care institution should not benefit from the estate until the public purse has got its share.

The minister said extension of the after-death payment principle to extended care hospitals and possibly to the proposed new government-run intermediate care rest homes wouldn't require a "freeze" to be placed on the estates of elderly patients.

But any transfers of funds from such estates, Loffmark said, could mean the government would regard the beneficiaries as responsible for the cost of the care or some portion of it.

Oil Spill Lines Drawn Up

Canadian Petroleum Association and the B.C. government have agreed on emergency measures in case of massive land oil spills, but Forestry Minister Ray Williston denied earlier reports the industry had been given emergency powers.

Williston explained that as in the case of fire, B.C. Forestry Service, in event of a dangerous land oil spill, "can co-opt such men and machines as necessary to control any given situation. The service is the only B.C. government agency with this power."

The procedure, Williston said, would be for industry representatives to request the forestry service to move in with their emergency powers.

John Bruce, senior staff officer, forestry management, said details of spill mop-up procedures will be announced when a final plan is complete.

B.C. Checks Beams In Schools

Education Minister Donald Brothers said Thursday the provincial government will check out any laminated beams made by Glulam Products Ltd. of Fraser Mills, B.C., which have been used in British Columbia schools.

Glulam, which recently went into receivership, produced some beams for construction projects in the lower B.C. mainland which were found to be faulty.

B.C. Gives Week To Cerebral Palsy

The week from Monday to May 29 has been proclaimed Cerebral Palsy Week by the provincial government. The week is intended to inform the public about the condition which affects more than 3,000 children under the age of 15 in B.C. The disorder is usually characterized by a loss of muscular control due to damage to the central nervous system.

Welcome Help Welcomed

Volunteer musicians and entertainers are being sought by Victoria Visitors' Bureau cruise ship committee, chairman Norma Fitzsimmons said Thursday.

"Anybody who can sing or play a musical instrument and will volunteer their services to meet the visiting cruise ships throughout the summer will be very welcome," Mrs. Fitzsimmons said.

"It is not all work, because after the entertainment the welcoming committee is usually invited to visit aboard the ships, which is very pleasant," she added.

The committee met Thursday morning to make its final plans for the welcoming of the P and O cruise ship Arcadia which will dock at Ogden Point at 7 a.m. June 3.

The Arcadia will be welcomed to Victoria by members of Gerry Gosley's Smile Show, musicians, a military band, and a girls' drill team which will provide an honor guard to the civic official heading the welcoming committee.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons said that she hoped Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock will be able to welcome the Arcadia, but that had not been confirmed.

Sidewheeler Going Out For Harbor Cruise

Replica of the sidewheeler SS Beaver, skippered by Capt. J. Gracie, will sail from the Inner Harbor for a short distance 1 p.m. Sunday with about 100 members of the Hudsons Bay Company aboard in recognition of the company's efforts in making the Beaver into a historic museum.

Provincial COURT

A young Saanich woman was remanded in custody to June 2 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after she was found guilty Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court on a three-count charge of possession of drugs for the purpose of trafficking.

Judith Buckner, 4953 Cordova Bay Road, was found guilty by Judge William Ostler following a trial that took one day in February, three more in March and two more this month.

The trial followed a charge laid after police found 1,759 tablets of LSD, about 15½ ounces of marijuana and about half a pound of hashish last Nov. 6 at the Cordova Bay Road address.

Trials involving such charges are held in two parts, first on possession and second on purpose. Mrs. Buckner originally was charged jointly with her husband James William Buckner but the charge against him was dismissed by Ostler after completion of the possession part of the trial, due to lack of evidence.

Cecil Branson was prosecutor and Dermod Owen-Flood defence lawyer.

"I'd like to go to a forestry camp," Ostler was told by Ronald James Mounsey, 17, of 2642 Shakespeare — and the judge agreed.

Mounsey pleaded guilty May 10 to a Victoria charge containing eight counts of breaking and entering and theft, four counts of attempted break-ins and three counts of break-ins with intent. Last Monday, he pleaded guilty to a four-count Victoria charge of breaking and entering and theft.

A Victoria policeman told court earlier the 12 thefts occurred in eight businesses and four homes between Feb. 23 and May 9. About $843 in cash was stolen, along with a camera, a radio and some liquor.

John Edwin Straw, 19, address not known, was fined $75 and given a one-year probationary term following his plea of guilty April 28 to a charge of taking a car without the owner's consent.

The charge resulted from his use April 27 of a convertible stolen earlier from the B.C. Vocational School at 4461 Interurban. A Saanich policeman told court April 28 that Straw informed officers he was "just driving it around joyriding."

□

A suspended sentence and one-year probationary term were set for Godfrey Collinson, 21, of 855 Queens, who pleaded guilty May 10 to a charge of being unlawfully in a dwelling house with intent to commit an indictable offence.

A Victoria policeman told court earlier Collinson was seen to run out of a house at 243 Mary early May 9 after someone in the house heard a noise.

Wine with Meal Aim of Elderly

CALGARY (CP) — The nursing-home patients at the Sarcee Auxiliary Hospital have asked they be given the same drinking privileges as the province's 18-year-olds were recently granted.

F. J. Sullivan, a member of the hospital's board, told a meeting Wednesday he was told by patients they wanted wine with their meals.

The board decided to await a medical committee recommendation before acting on the matter.

If your tires look like this

When did you last look at your tires?

You may be in for a nasty surprise. Official safety inspections indicate that most motorists don't know what shape their tires are in. And that's surprising, when you remember that everything is riding on your tires.

When you check them, watch for wear bars showing through. These are strips that run across the tire that show up when the tread wears down past the safety margin. You can easily tell when it's time to replace worn, unsafe tires.

So check your tires. Then check our SunSational Deals. We've got one for you.

Advance Resumed In Light Trade

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial and western oil stocks led advancing issues as prices closed fractionally higher in light trading.

The advance interrupted three consecutive losing sessions. However, gold and metal issues continued to drift fractionally lower.

Asamera was up 2¼ to 22⅞, through a subsidiary, it holds a 60-per-cent interest in an oil discovery in Indonesia. Thomson Newspapers rose 1¼ to 27½. General Distributing 1⅛ to 17, International Utilities ⅞ to 41¼, Rio Algom ⅝ to 19⅛ and Canadian Superior Oil 1¼ to 43¼.

Victoria and Grey Trust was up ¾ to 26¾, Montreal Trust ¾ to 13¾, Pan Ocean ⅜ to 18⅝, Westcoast Production ½ to 11, Placer ⅝ to 33½, and Ivaco ½ to 14.

CPR fell 1 to 65¾, Rothmans ⅝ to 10⅞, Pacific Pete ⅝ to 28½, Imperial Oil ⅛ to 22¾, Moore ⅛ to 36¾, BP Oil and Gas 15 cents to 6.35, Cassiar ⅜ to 22¾ and Opemiska ¼ to 11.

Oils Turn Lower

VANCOUVER — Prices were mixed in all sections with minus signs predominating in oils.

Stronger among the mines were Lornex. Gibraltar, Sabina, and Valley Copper. In the actives Jericho, Zenith and Pathfinder were ahead.

Imperial Marine led industrials up with a gain of .25 at 3.05 while EDP rose .15 at 1.35. Computrex (ex Micrographics) rose .01 to .52.

Ballinderry was off .09 in the oils.

Enthusiasm Wanes

NEW YORK (AP) — The market drifted higher in fairly moderate trading as bargain hunters continued nibbling at issues depressed by the sharp drop earlier this week.

Buying enthusiasm waned as the session progressed.

The NYSE index of 1,300 common stocks climbed 0.14 to 55.79.

Rubber issues, aircrafts, electronics and metals were generally higher. Steels, mail-order-retail, utilities, chemicals, rails, oils and airlines were mixed. Motors were unchanged.

Commercial Solvent rose 3⅜ to 39⅞. Recently the Italian government gave the company permission to market a new heart drug.

Uneven Action

MONTREAL (CP) — After a cautiously strong open, prices retreated slightly and closed mixed.

Q.S.P. Ltd. was up 1½ to 14, Asbestos 1½ to 34½, Rio Algom 1 to 19⅛, Credit Foncier 1 to 51½, International Utilities ¾ to 41¼, Southam Press ½ to 61, Distillers-Seagrams ½ to 53⅝, Bank of Nova Scotia ⅜ to 24⅝.

Pacific Petroleum lot ⅞ to 28⅝, Royal Trust ¾ to 32½, Rothmans ¾ to 10⅛, Westcoast Transmission ½ to 25½, Canada Steamship Lines ⅛ to 32⅛.

GULF CANADA APPOINTMENT

J. C. Phillips, Q.C.

The Board of Directors of Gulf Oil Canada Limited has elected J. C. Phillips, Q.C., as Vice-President and General Counsel of the Company.

A graduate of the University of Toronto and of Osgoode Hall Law School, Mr. Phillips joined Gulf Canada in 1956 following several years with a Toronto law firm. He was appointed General Counsel in 1964.

$3 Million Quarter

All Systems At Granduc Working Well

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Granduc Mines Ltd. shipped its first load of copper concentrates early in January and the operating company has informed the owners that up to March 31, the mill had produced 12,137 tons of concentrates averaging 28.25 per cent copper.

With copper at 50 cents a pound the value of the production would be around $3 million for the quarter.

All phrases of the operation are said to be working well. The main tunnel from mine to mill is handling 7,000 tons of ore in less than the allotted time of 16 hours. The road from the mill to the loading wharf at Stewart has been kept open on a 24-hour basis without interruption despite this being a heavy snowfall part of the year.

British Comeback

Another large and important British incursion into the economic life of the United States is announced by Imperial Chemical Co. Britain's largest chemical corporation, which also controls among many other foreign investments, Canadian Industries Ltd.

ICI America, the U.S. subsidiary of ICI, has reached agreement to consolidate with Atlas Chemical Industries, a Wilmington, Delaware, company specializing in drugs and pharmaceutical products.

Atlas shareholders will receive $40 a share for their holdings and the new company will be known as ICI America Inc., with W.B. Duncan continuing as chairman and chief executive officer of the expanded firm.

ICI says the merger is the most important single step taken by ICI in the western hemisphere, creating a strong company fully capable of developing on a broad base from its own and ICI's innovation and research discoveries.

Purchases Costly

Bill Mandry, executive vice president of Canadian Industries Ltd., commenting on the merger said he had no idea how the new ICI giant in the U.S. would affect his company. Both, however, will be in the control of the British parent.

Britain which had to part with most of its U.S. investments to pay the U.S. for its war-time purchases in the early part of the Second World War is slowly but surely creeping back into the western hemisphere scene. In addition to ICI, the giant British Petroleum is a major participant in the U.S. oil scene through its acquisition of Sinclair Oil and other U.S. oil companies.

□

A net loss of $105,780 (seven cents a share) is reported for 1970 by Captain International Industries Ltd., a Vancouver firm supplying automatic equipment for the hotel-motel industry.

This was an improvement on the loss of $757,744 (28 cents) in 1969.

The 1970 loss included $99,558 arising from expenses in completing a registration with the SEC in the U.S. and from losses resulting from the freeing of the Canadian dollar last May.

Bonds Returning

Retractible bonds are coming back into favor as the bond market twitches and turns under the double threat of possible new inflationary waves, and a dull thud from the government's tax reform bill.

This week's issue of $10 million debentures by the Traders Group has a 9½ per cent coupon, and it may be redeemed at the option of the holder either on June 15, 1976 or on June 15, 1991. The option at least provides the issue with a measure of stability in its early years.

Falconbridge Nickel Mines has filed a prospectus with the SEC in Washington to rise $50 million in sinking-fund debentures on the U.S. market.

Details as to price and coupon are not yet available, but the debentures are to be dated May 1, and they will mature in 1996.

A few weeks ago, Falconbridge sold $75 million sinking fund debentures on the Canadian market with a 7¾ per cent coupon, but the price did not hold and the debentures are now trading about 93.

□

Short-term interest rates took another tumble Thursday when bidding was keen for the two weekly issues of Government of Canada treasury bills.

The 91-day bills auctioned to give a yield of 2.96 per cent, down from 3.09 per cent the previous week.

□

Micrographics, a Vancouver listed industrial stock is now trading under its new name Computrex.

It was the heaviest industrial trader in Thursday's session closing at 52 cents, up one cent from its Wednesday close of 51 cents as Micrographics.

Takeover Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greater Vancouver Civic Museum and Planetarium Board has applied to the Pacific National Exhibition for takeover of the Lipsett Indian collection.

The collection contains about 1,000 artifacts of Indians and primitive tribes from other parts of the world.

Bennett Seeks Winter Sports

Premier Bennett has proposed a winter version of B.C. Festival of Sports as part of the province's Centennial 71 celebrations.

He made the suggestion Thursday at a government luncheon following the official opening of the second annual sports festival, which will involve some 200,000 athletes in 124 communities throughout B.C.

The government's aim, Bennett said, has been to encourage participation by British Columbians in all forms of sport and the fact that this year's festival involves 50,000 more people is proof that this concept has been successful.

The premier said the 1972 festival will have a "hand-across-the-Pacific theme," but he didn't elaborate. This year's festival runs for three weeks.

At the official opening, Canadian 100-metre hurdles record-holder Penny May of Victoria handed the festival torch to Bennett, who lit a festival flame on a pillar in front of the legislative buildings.

Air Pollution Charge Laid

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The province of Ontario has laid charges of air pollution against Ford of Canada.

The charges, laid in provincial court Thursday, allege that, on two occasions, Ford's Windsor plant polluted the air to such extent or degree as may cause discomfort to persons.

The charges, which were laid under the Air Pollution Control Act, were held over to June 10.

Goliath Wins in GM Version

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. and dissident stockholders led by Campaign GM, which owns just 12 shares of GM stock out of 286 million, Thursday prepared for their David and Goliath confrontation with Campaign GM anticipating immediate defeat but victory in the future.

The group, which succeeded in gaining less than three per cent of stockholder support for its two resolutions last year, had three resolutions on the 1971 ballot for Friday's annual stockholders meeting. One of them has attracted substantial support from institutional shareholders.

The three proposals call for:

- Election of three directors representing GM employees, dealers and customers nominated by those constituencies even though they may not be shareholders.
- Listing in the proxy statement and the ballot of up to 30 candidates for the board, in addition to the slate proposed by management.
- Disclosure of more details in the corporation's annual report about pollution control and vehicle safety developments, minority hiring, recall campaigns and development of manpower.

Philip Moore, executive director of the project on corporate responsibility, which sponsors Campaign GM, said his group had no hopes of getting any of its proposals adopted.

Food Industry

Wage Talks Drifting Into Problems

Trouble spots are beginning to show up in major food industry negotiations.

One of four unions involved is taking strike votes in the Vancouver area and plans similar action in Victoria next week.

The over-all talks concern various phases of the industry, such as processing, distribution and sales.

The strike vote started with 300 employees of the South Burnaby operation of MacDonald's Consolidated Ltd. — all members of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union.

The company's South Burnaby terminal is the main distribution point for Canada Safeway supermarkets throughout the province.

Other strike votes will be conducted among some 100 employees at Vancouver area plants this week and 35 at the MacDonald's produce and grocery warehouse in Victoria next week, according to John Squire, of Vancouver, international representative for the union.

Another vote following that will include some 10 workers at Dawson Creek.

A strike by this one union alone could be expected to shut down all Safeway outlets, a union spokesman said.

However, such action couldn't be expected in the immediate future. Jack Leany, chief negotiator for Canada Safeway, said the company has applied for the services of a provincial mediator. No strike or lockout can begin legally while a mediator is on the job.

"Everything is in dispute," Squire said Thursday.

The various contracts covering the retail and wholesale workers expired March 31. Other unions involved in talks with distribution companies and supermarkets are the butchers, bakery workers and retail clerks.

A mediator has been appointed to try and bring settlement in negotiations concerning the bakery workers.

Squire said the contracts of the different unions expire almost at the same time.

His union's original demand was for a wage increase of $1.50 an hour on rates ranging from $3.90 to $4.64.

'Business Is Great'

Prizes For Students

Laura

She's small — just about five feet tall, and her red and white minidress sets of her dark hair and eyes.

She seems shy, but there's also a quiet confidence about her.

It's a confidence she says she's gained through working and learning with others in the operation of a mini-business.

Although 15-year-old Laura Porcher considers herself just one of the younger members of Junior Achievement in Victoria, she earned a prize Thursday night as Miss Junior Achievement.

It's an award not given only on the basis of her undoubted good looks, but based too on her work in the movement in her capacity as assistant treasurer of the company to which she belongs.

"It's an absolutely fascinating thing, this Junior Achievement," said the young saleswoman.

"I just heard about it at a school meeting earlier this year, and was so enthused, I joined and it's been even better than I thought."

Then the practical side of her nature came out.

"There's another thing too. You get an 'in' with the companies that sponsor the program, so that when you apply for a summer or full-time job they take this into account."

That practicality was something most of the Grade 10, 11 and 12 students had in common at the awards-giving dinner Thursday night.

Take Ann Van der Hooft, the 17-year-old Claremont high student who walked off with both the Victoria and provincial salesmanship awards.

She wants to be a veterinarian and that salesmanship is destined to finance her education.

And then there's Paul Partridge, who collected so many awards he could barely carry them home.

He's heading for a career in business management by way of the B.C. Institute of Technology or Camosun College.

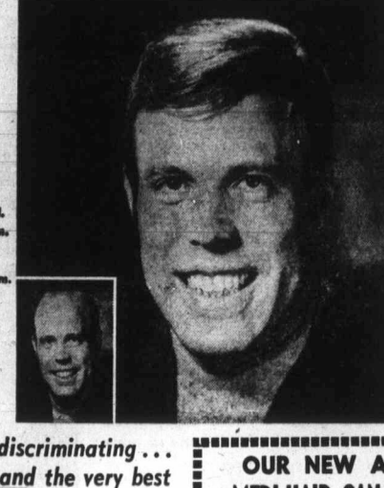

"I want to get to the top rung," he said, "Business is the greatest thing, and especially learning to be a president.

"There's the incentive of making your own money and increasing profits off your own bat.

"You have to create an involvement among your workers to develop to your fullest capacity."

VEGA
CHEVROLET

IF WE DON'T HAVE WHAT YOU'RE LOOKING FOR IN A LITTLE CAR, YOU'RE NOT LOOKING FOR A LITTLE CAR.

Whatever you want in a little car, Vega's the little car you want. Because with four models to choose from—a Hatchback coupe, a two-door sedan, a Kammback wagon and a panel express—one will be just what you want. So don't be fooled by imitations. Vega gives you standard front disc brakes for sure, straight stops. Because we think it's important that the little car that goes so well, stops well, too. And to make it go, there's a standard 2300 cc. engine made from an aluminum/silicon alloy that's light, but strong. So you can scoot right up big hills or around other cars when you have to pass.
And there's Full Coil suspension, because you don't like to bounce around when you're driving, even in a little car. Go right ahead and relax, too, because the front bucket seats (standard) and rear seats are very comfortable. We build them with deep, full foam.
So, if you're looking for a little car—find out all about Vega. You'll see what a little car should be.

You could win up to $30,000.
Time is running out on the big Moneymiles Sweepstakes, so hustle down to your participating Chevy dealer's and get all the details. And drive Vega, the little car that does everything well.

$2351.
Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price for this Vega 2-door sedan at Oshawa, Ontario. Price quoted includes Federal Sales Taxes. Provincial and local taxes, license, accessories, optional equipment and transportation charges are additional.

Vega. The little car that loves to be driven.

Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost.

You cut down on air pollution, too.

About a decade ago, we made a promise to remove our cars from the air pollution problem.
Today we're making good. We're almost there.
1971 Chevrolets emit 80% less hydrocarbons than typical cars of roughly ten years ago. And about 2/3 less carbon monoxide.
Best of all, we're testing devices that can reach control levels as high as 95%.
But it hasn't been easy. We've had to develop devices that muzzle and reburn exhaust fumes. Devices that check wayward gases around the crankcase vent.
Devices that prevent the escape of raw gasoline vapors.
We've even had to invent instruments sophisticated enough to measure the effectiveness of these devices.
The goal and reward have been one and the same: cleaner air.
Estimates are that if all North American industry could make similar strides, and all cars on the road today were emission controlled like '71 Chevrolets, we'd be breathing 1940 air.
You might call that a great step backward. A step we've been proud to take.

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE
Buckling seat and shoulder belts is an idea you can live with.

Vic West Plans Birthday

Victoria West of the Victoria and District Soccer League is celebrating its 75th anniversary Saturday with tripleheader featuring three Vic West teams at Royal Athletic Park.

The tripleheader includes an opening game at 10:45 a.m. against Olson United of Seattle in a juvenile Division I clash. Then the senior Division II team meets Portland Americans at 1 p.m. followed by the senior Division I team against a District League All-Star team at 2:55.

The club has produced a 75th Anniversary book, with information and pictures of the club since its inception. Copies are available, at $1 each, from president Wilf Sadler, 4476 Tyndall Ave.

Knudson and Blancas Share Colonial Invitational Lead

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Defending — champion Homero Blancas and George Knudson of Toronto posted early 67s and shared the first-round lead in the $125,000 Colonial National Invitational Golf Tournament Thursday.

The two tour veterans came in with their three-under-par rounds before the bright, Texas sun sent the temperature soaring into the high 80s and lured a huge gallery to the 7142-yard Colonial Country Club layout.

They held a one stroke lead over a trio of non-winning tour regulars, Bert Greene, Texas Fred Marti and Jack Montgomery, tied at 68.

Lee Trevino, one of the pretourney favorities, had a 70, as did Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg and 11 others.

Knudson, 33 hasn't finished higher than 11th this year.

SANK 25 FOOTER

He had to sink a 25-foot putt for one over par on the final hole — he had put his second shot in the water — to salvage his share of the lead.

Knudson birdied the first two holes hitting iron shots inside four feet, was one over par on the third when he took three from the fringe, and ran in a 35-foot putt on the fifth hole.

He wedged within five feet on the 11th hole and went four under with a 25-foot putt on the 17th.

A University of Texas freshman, 19-year-old Ben Crenshaw, headed a group at 69. The others were former PGA champion Dave Stockton, Chuck Courtney, Jerry Heard and Bert Yancey.

LAYOUT TOUGH

Some of the top candidates for the $25,000 first prize had their troubles on the tough, hilly layout.

Billy Casper, South African Gary Player and rookie Hubert Green, winner of last week's Houston Champions Invitational, all had 73s.

Masters champ Charles Coody took a 74 in the almost ideal conditions.

The 32-year-old Blancas, who hasn't won since taking this title a year ago, has finished seventh and 10th in the last two events, both in Texas.

Blancas had three birdies and 15 pars. He wedged to within two and one-half feet on the first hole, hit a five-iron shot 10 feet from the pin and made the putt on the 15th, then ran in a 38-foot monster on the 17th hole.

Blancas missed three greens but saved par on all of them, coming out of two traps to within 30 inches and chipping to two feet on the other.

Champs Returning To Defend Crown

Seattle Westgate Builders will be back to defend their title this weekend in the annual Victoria Day Holiday tournament sponsored by the Victoria Major Men's League at Central Park.

Other visiting teams in the three-day, double-knockout event include Golden Tide and Thunderbirds, both from Seattle, Campbell River and Industrial Marine Industries from New Westminster.

They join the three local league teams, Bate Construction, which meets Campbell River in Saturday's opening game at 10 a.m., Strathcona Hotel, which plays IMI at noon and Seaboard Construction, which plays Golden Tide at 2 p.m. Thunderbirds and Westgate meet in the other first-round game at 4 p.m.

The winners of the first and second games meet at 6:30 in the final game of the day.

Games follow the same starting times Sunday and Monday, except that if a second game is necessary in the final, it will go at 6 p.m. instead of 6:30.

Campbell River features Pete Landers, a left-hander considered one of the best pitchers in Canada while veteran Merle Johnson, a long-time outstanding hurler in the Vancouver area, is scheduled to appear with IMI.

Colwood Inn snapped a first-place tie and Bell's Men's Wear climbed into a second-place tie with Langford Drywall as the result of two one-sided Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League games Thursday night.

Catcher Lyle Campbell slammed a two-run homer and Colwood scored runs in every inning but the fifth in coasting to a 10-4 victory over Gilmour Construction at Heywood Avenue Park. Bell's overpowered William Head, 10-0, at William Head Park.

Colwood rolled to a 7-0 lead before pitcher Bob Walton hit a homer in the fourth inning for Gilmour.

Bell's got eight unearned runs in a second-inning burst, aided by four errors by their hosts. Pitcher Eric Peterson doubled in Ernie Savoy and John Lauvaas for the remaining two runs in the fifth inning.

Par Tough In Arkansas

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bob Bourne shot a four-undr-par 68 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the $25,000 Maumelle Open golf tournament. Bourne held a two-stroke lead on Ken Fulton of Montreal and Mike Morley.

Only eight other players broke par — Ben Kern of Toronto; Bert Weaver, Tin Berg; Stan Brion; Bob Erickson, Mike Mallon, Jim Awtrey and Curtis Sifford, all at 71. Gary Bowerman of Toronto had a 72.

Given plenty of offensive support from his teammates, Ken Larson of Bate Construction breezed to a 9-0 victory over Strathcona Hotel with a one-hitter Thurday in Victoria Major Men's Sofball League action at Central Park.

Steve Bishop's two-out single in the third inning spoiled Larson's hopes for a no-hitter. Only two other Strathcona batters reached base, Bishop when hit by a pitch in the first inning and Roy St. Denis on a base on balls immediately preceding the single.

Bob Holness, who drew a base on balls in his first trip to the plate, hit a home run, triple and double, driving in two runs while Ken Bate drove in three runs with three singles to lead Bates' 14-hit attack.

Three Programs . . . . . . Set for Weekend

It'll Be Busy at Western

Super stock and stock cars will combine to offer dual excitment at Western Speedway Saturday, in the first of three events scheduled for the holiday weekend.

A double-header program is scheduled Monday with open competition and the first figure-eight race of the season in the afternoon, and a stock-car points match and foreign stock car program in the evening.

The second super-stock points competition of the season Saturday is expected to produce a fierce battle, as Rick O'Dell fights to maintain his lead over Ross Surgenor and Larry Walker.

Both Walker and Surgenor experienced problems during the first match of the season, but proved strong last Sunday at Langley Speedway, when Walker set a new track record and Surgenor placed second in the main event.

Mel Marshall will be on hand, in the stock-car division, substituting for vacationing Harvey St. Hilaire.

Chris Van De Water and Orton Kerr, along with the father-son team of Earl and Larry Pollard are expected to offer a stiff challenge to the returning veteran. Van De Water is currently holding the stock car points lead, and Kerr, who has placed consistently, will be competing with a new six-cylinder engine.

Time trials Saturday start at 7 p.m. with the first race at 8.

NEW WESTMINSTER — New Westminster Salmonbellies took over sole possession of first place in the Western Lacrosse Association Thursday by defeating Victoria Shamrocks, 15-7.

The win broke a three-way tie for the lead among the two teams and idle Coquitlam Adanacs.

Steve d'Easum didn't score, but engineered the Salmonbellies' attack as he set up six goals.

Brothers Ed and Wayne Goss each scored three times for the defending Mann Cup champions, with Ed adding two assists for a five-point night.

Playing-coach Paul Parnell picked up two goals and an assist to move within two points of becoming the second player in Western senior lacrosse to collect 2000 points. His coaching predecessor, Cliff Sepka, was the other.

Barry Erlendson also scored two goals for the winners while Mickey Lynch, Dave Matheson, Al Lewthwaite, Ray Bennie and Brian Jones each scored one.

Joe Comeau had a relatively easy night in the New Westminster goal, making only 30 stops as compared to 42 for hard-pressed Shamrock rookie Dave Wirtanen.

Ray Beech was the only Shamrock to score twice. Ken Alexander, Charn Dhillon, Tom Somner, Brent Atkins, and Vern Black were the other scorers.

Salmonbellies grabbed a 6-2 lead in the first period and boosted the margin to 11-5 going into the final 20 minutes.

It was the second straight loss for the Victorians, who opened the schedule with three straight wins.

Softball Scores

Esquimalt Combos trounced Canadian Forces Roadrunners, 48-7, and Westendale Constructionettes defeated Independents, 9-4, Thursday in Victoria Women's Softball League Action.

Island Side, Fans Dazzled By Field Hockey Visitors

Inside-right Ricardo Cabrera dazzled a crowd of about 400 with his stick-work at Royal Athletic Park Thursday night, scoring three goals as the San Fernando Club of Buenos Aires outclassed a Vancouver Island Select XI, 5-0, in the third match of its men's field hockey tour of Canada.

Cabrera scored the only goal of the first half as some great defensive work by Vancouver Island's goalkeeper Peter Hunt, fullback and captain Craig Wilson and centre-half Amarjit Hundal kept the score to 1-0 at half time.

But then, the Argentina side took control with a clever short-passing game and Cabrera exploded for two more goals.

Inside-left Ernesto Barreiros and wing Carlos Cocina scored the other goals as the hosts managed only nine shots on goal.

For goalkeeper Jose Caputo it was his third shutout in three games. San Fernando battled to a 0-0 draw with the B.C. President's XI in the tour opener in Vancouver, then beat a Canada "B" team, 1-0, also in Vancouver.

Petrocelli and Lee Star As Red Sox Extend Lead

Rico Petrocelli, continuing a hot home-run streak, and a pitcher getting his first start in more than a year combined Thursday to lead Boston Red Sox to a three-game bulge in the Eastern Division of the American League.

Petrocelli, with his third home run in four games, followed Carl Yastrzemski's run-scoring double with a two-run blow to give left-hander Bill Lee a 3-0 lead in the first inning on the way to a 5-2 victory over New York Yankees.

Lee, usually used in relief, lost his shutout in the sixth inning when Danny Cater drove in a run with a sacrifice fly and Felipe Alou followed with a run-scoring single.

George Scott added a two-run homer in the eighth inning for the Red Sox, who moved up when rain in Washington cancelled the runner-up Baltimore Orioles' game.

Willie Horton's two-run homer in the 11th inning gave Detroit Tigers a 5-3 victory over Cleveland Indians, who ended Joe Coleman's hopes of a fifth straight victory by tying the game with two out in the bottom of the ninth.

Carlton, Cards Dump Dodgers

St. Louis Cardinals, with Steve Carlton continuing to show the reversal of his 1970 form, closed in on the leading teams Thursday in the tight Eastern Division race in the National League.

Carlton, who had a sorry 10-19 record last year, threw a five-hitter to down Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-0.

It was the third shutout of the season for Carlton, who brought his record to seven wins in nine decisions.

Joe Hague drove in two runs with singles in the first and eighth innings while Lou Brock doubled in a run in the seventh inning to extend his hitting streak to 16 games.

Wes Parker, with a double and two singles for the Dodgers. Willie Davis, running his hitting streak to 13 games, and Richie Allen had the other hits.

GAIN GROUND

Cardina; remained in third place, but are now only one game behind leading Pittsburgh Pirates and only a few percentage points behind second-place New York Mets.

Cincinnati Reds ended a four-game Pittsburgh win streak with a 5-4 decision and the six-hit pitching of Rick Wise and Deron Johnson's home run helped Philadelphia Phillies extend New York's losing streak to five games in a 1-0 contest.

Willie McCovey's three-run homer in the ninth inning gave San Francisco Giants an 8-7 victory over Chicago Cubs as the Giants continue to be the only major-league team playing better than .700 baseball.

John Boccabella's lead-off home run in the 14th inning gave Montreal Expos a 4-3 victory over Atlanta Braves and San Diego Padres stopped Houston Astros, 4-2.

"Conservation" winds have taken the pressure off the fish but that really only means there should be more fish available for sports anglers this holiday weekend. With the forecast for improving weather, all signals are "go."

John Ebert, Clive Macfarlane and Paul Diggle went out to April Point waters, across from Campbell River Thursday morning and returned before breakfast with their limits of blues, some of them nudging the five-pound mark. All were taken "right on the top, no weight, on little spoons, 4½ Tom Macks, and flies."

Bill Heybroek and Oscar Petersen limited on trout up to three pounds on bobber and worm in Lower Campbell Wednesday. "They were definitely bottom feeding. They had digested all the ants from last weekend. There was no sign of a fresh hatch," reported Heybroek.

"If it doesn't get too hot this weekend, Lower and Upper Campbell and all the small lakes should be good," he predicts.

Blueback fishing is good from Porlier Pass to Campbell River, when anglers can get on the water, and the closer you get to Campbell River the better the fishing. That is the happy report.

A great abundance of blues has been reported from Cape Mudge lighthouse at Campbell River out to the Bell Buoy and Mitlenatch Island, off Oyster Bay and Miracle Beach.

Bill Fleming reports hot bluebacking off Little River and Bates Beach.

Deep Bay waters have been producing in the Chrome (Yellow Rock) Island and Norris Rocks waters.

French Creek, Qualicum, Mistaken Island waters have all been good for bluebacks and some chinooks when anglers can get on the water, but it has been windy. The fish are there, but you have to get out to catch them.

Sansum Narrows has been producing some chinooks for deep trollers. Some good-sized chinooks have been taken from Deep Cove waters and in Saanich Inlet there is a good-sized school of bluebacks moving about in the centre of the Inlet from McKenzie Bay to Patricia Bay. Find them and you get some good fishing. Jack are being taken along McCurdy Point to Bamberton shores and a few bigger chinooks are still coming from Finlayson Arm waters, although fishing slowed down somewhat.

Oak Bay has been best bet in the windy weather for the good-sized chinooks. There seems little doubt that Pedder, Becher and Sooke waters will produce big chinooks if anglers dare to go on the water.

Chemainus River is producing some good steelhead fishing, as it always does at this time of year. The Victoria area lakes — Prospect, Elk, Beaver, Langford and Glen — are all producing bass, and except for Langford, trout.

Cowichan River has been giving up some big trout in the upper reaches and Cowichan Lake has come on fairly well on the troll with gang troll and worm, while the bait fishing at creek mouths continues good. But fly fishing fell off sharply with colder weather and lack of a hatch.

★ ★ ★

There are three trout derbies this weekend. Campbell River Lions Club will hold its annual derby Sunday, open to all lakes in the Campbell River area, with weigh-ins at McIvor and Loveland Lakes, until 3.30 p.m.

The St. Louis Men's Club holds its annual derby on Cowichan Lake Saturday.

Port Alberni Buffalos will sponsor a two-lake derby on great Central and Sproat Lakes and it is open to any angler, with weigh-ins at Ark Resort, on Great Central and Kjeckstead Park on Sproat Lake.

★ ★ ★

Ron Perks took the trophy for the first week of the VSIAA Centennial Ladder Derby with a 20-pounder. Hidden weight winners were Garry Vaughn, Hans Radtke, Walter Fenske, Bessie Craig and Frank Jenvey.

★ ★ ★

If anyone is planning a trip to the Kootenays, he could see the sight of a lifetime. More than 200 huge rainbow trout, weighing up to 30 pounds, are now spawning in the Lardeau River, just downstream from Trout Lake.

This spectacular run of fish from Kootenay Lake spawn in a very limited area of river and are quite visible to visitors to the site.

★ ★ ★

And, if you are going camping this weekend, remember to get that campfire permit today before 4.30 from a forest service ranger station. This is the weekend the persecution of recreationist by the forest service will really be felt. If you live at Port Renfrew, for instance, you have to come into the Langford ranger station to get your campfire permit, or go to Cowichan. If you neglect to get your campfire permit before closing time tonight, you just can't have a campfire . . . and the only place authorized to issue campfire permits are the forest service ranger stations. It's a haywire system, but that is the way it is . . . for this weekend, at least.

School Track Meet Lacking In Entries from Up-Island

Gail Turney, the defending Colonist Cup winner as outstanding female performer, is one of the few features which make the seventh annual Vancouver Island Inter-High School Track and Field meet tonight and Saturday anything but an extension of the Victoria meet.

Gail

Track and field north of the Malahat at the high school level has apparently dropped greatly. Only Cowichan, Miss Turney's school, Nanaimo, Campbell River and the two boys' private schools, Brentwood College and Shawnigan Lake are joining the eight Victoria-area schools today and Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

DEFENDING CHAMPION

Mt. Douglas, which squeeked out a narror win last year over Oak Bay, will be seeking to repeat. Also back are third-place Claremont, fourth-place Victoria and fifth-place Esquimalt.

Next came Brentwood and Shawnigan, but Alberni District, which topped the northern schools, didn't file an application. Neither did Chemainus, Qualicum, Lake Cowichan or Quamichan, who all collected points last year. Courtenay's George Vanier will also be missing.

B.C. BERTHS

That means no one from those schools will be eligible for the B.C. championships, as the first two public-school performers in each event earn the Island's two berths for the provincial meet, scheduled here June 4 and 5.

Nonetheless, the Island meet should prove a good test as the athletes, led by Miss Turney in the sprints and long jump, attempt to win the zone championship at the B.C. meet for a third straight year. In addition, Mt. Douglas will be seeking enough berths to repeat as individual provincial champion.

There will be heats and finals both today and tomorrow. Today's program runs from 5:30 p.m. to about 8:00 and Saturday's from noon until about 4 p.m.

Murtagh In Hospital

CINCINNATI (AP) — Manager Danny Murtaugh of Pittsburgh Pirates was taken to hospital after suffering chest and arm pains before Thursday's National League baseball game with Cincinnati Reds.

Murtaugh had heart problems in 1964, the main reason he quit as manager of the Pirates then. His problem was diagnosed as a heart murmur.

Football Clubs Pick Coaches

Frank Hindle of rookie entry Victoria Dolphins wil not be the only new head coach this season in the Big Four Junior Canadian Football League.

Vancouver Blue Bombers will be guided by Dave Rosborough, stepping up after leading North Shore Wildcats to the Big Four juvenile title last year.

So far Rosborough has two assistant coaches in holdovers Gord Barstow and Richie McLennon.

North Shore Cougars also have a new head coach in Ray McLeod, a former tackle in the Canadian Football League with Edmonton Eskimos and Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

McLeod, who coached Vancouver College in the school league last season, has former B.C. Lions Lonnie Dennis, Sonny Homer and Vic Kristopaitis among his assistants.

North Shore plans to start workouts Monday while Bombers begin light drills June 1. Victoria has already started workouts.

Vancouver Meralomas and Burnaby Spartans, the other teams in the league, will be coached by holdovers Ed Murray and Wayne Patriquin, respectively.

The season is set to open with the league's traditional round-robin tournament, tentatively scheduled for Victoria in mid-August.

Join the party, comrade.

Amateur Partners Find

Golf with Trevino Traumatic

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A round of golf with professional Lee Trevino is a traumatic experience for an amateur, but it does wonders for your game even while it's intimidating.

It starts when Trevino makes light of your sleezy golf bag and dumps the clubs out on the first tee box as a gag.

Then he presents you with a box of golf balls on the fourth tee that contains his fake snake. And on the ninth tee he raps your ball into the pond when you miss a putt.

For Trevino, it's all part of the ritual of the pro-am at a major golf tournament. In this case, the tournament is the $125,000 Colonial National Invitation.

"I love pro-ams," Trevino said. One of the top money winners on the tour, Lee said he feels the fans and club members deserve some attention.

"The people out here, the spectators, they pay their money and they deserve to be treated friendly. I try to make them laugh. It's during the pro-am that I tell jokes and clown with them. Can you ever imagine me doing this while playing with Arnold Palmer?"

Trevino seldom is silent during the 18 holes with his three amateur partners. He even talks to himself when he hits the ball.

"I don't swing so well in the daytime," he tells a lovely young lady in hot pants watching him at the eighth tee, "but I'm a helluva swinger at night."

Two of his partners are celebreties, singer Bobby Goldsboro and actor Guy Madison.

One of Goldsboro's putts slides 10 feet past the cup and Trevino asks: "Why didn't you use that shot off the tee?"

Later, when Goldsboro sinks a putt, Trevino says: "Not bad for a broken down crooner."

When Madison, television's former Wild Bill Hickok, disappeared for a time into the trees after a lost ball, Trevino yelled to the fans: "His horse must have thrown him again."

Royal Visit Booked

Photographs of the royal family's visit to Victoria earlier this month have become a top souvenir item.

For Daily Colonist photographer Jim Ryan, requests for his pictures have been coming in thick and fast. Now he has solved the order problem that has kept his telephonoe ringing day and night.

He is publishing a book of outstanding photos of the queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne during their visit to Victoria.

The book — printed by Colonist Printers Ltd. — will be available to the public next week and covers all the activities of the royal family in the city from their arrival the evening of May 3 aboard the royal yacht Britannia.

It includes the official welcome from the city of Victoria by Mayor Courtney Haddock and civic dignitaries at Centennial Square, the inspection of the Old Contemptibles of the First World War and cadets of the Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's) Regiment by the queen.

Then there is the great turnout the next day at the legislative buildings and the tour of Heritage Court with Premier Bennett.

Included in the souvenir Royal Vist '71 book are photos of many of the thousands of Victorians who took part in the welcome — one of the greatest ever accorded the queen during her 18-year reign.

There are pictures of Princess Anne at Long Beach, where she officially opened the Pacific Rim National Park.

And there are more at the state banquet at Government House, where the queen and Prince Philip were the guests of Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. John Nicholson. Premier Bennett presented the royal couple with B.C.'s Order of the Dogwood.

"I had so many requests for photos of the royal family visit here," says Ryan, "that I thought the public would like to have a souvenir picture book of the occasion.

"Many of these requests came from pensioners, who wanted to send the pictures to relatives in Great Britain. And there were also many phone calls from youngsters who wanted pictures to show their classmates at school, so I thought the picture book would be a good idea."

The 32-page book of black and white photographs was designed as a B.C. Centennial Year souvenir and only a limited number of copies are being published, at $2.25 a copy. They can be ordered by writing Ryan, Box 578 at Victoria Press Ltd., or directly from Ryan at 647 Ralph Street, Victoria, B.C.

Labor Asked To Back Hospital Strike

Organized labor in B.C. is being asked to declare war on possible fronts against Vancouver-based National Nursing Homes Ltd.

The rallying call has been sounded by the 28 women who have been on strike against Sandringham Private hospital in Victoria for almost eight months. Sandringham, at 1650 Fort, is managed by National Nursing Homes.

The strikers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, are attempting to set up a meeting in Vancouver that would draw all vital labor organizations together. The idea of the meeting would be to arrange a boycott of any building projects and other operations of National or its president, Neil Cook.

The appeal has been made by letter to the 151,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor, labor councils in Victoria and Vancouver, B.C.-Yukon Building Trades Council, such independent unions as the Teamsters and numerous other bodies, including the women's liberation movement in Vancouver and Voice of Women in Victoria.

Victoria Labor Council secretary Larry Ryan said it was hoped the federation of labor could arrange a meeting soon to deal with the matter.

Datsun 1600 Pickup: it's all the truck you need at half the price you've been paying

For around half the price of an ordinary truck, you get a half-ton that will cruise at 70, carry an extraordinary amount of anything and go a very long way on a gallon of gas.

For around half the price of a domestic truck, you get a powerful overhead camshaft engine, 6 ft. steel box, 4-speed all synchro shift, heavy duty suspension, and whitewall tires.

A Datsun truck is built for rugged reliability. So it will go a long way and do a lot of work without causing a lot of trouble, without costing a lot of money.

The Datsun 1600 pickup is all the truck you need for half the price you've been paying — which is one reason why it's North America's best-selling imported pickup.

The more-for-your-money truck.

Four Find Fun at Fair

Day at the fair is never complete without children and Victoria Jaycee fair has its share of youthful visitors. Youngsters were having field day when photographer Jim Ryan toured grounds. Elliott Jones, 5, tackles cob of corn with gusto; Kim Waters, 2, tentatively tries sucker still in wrapper, while Benny Peleshaty, 3, shyly watches rides and Bradley Morrey, also 3, looks awed as he waits to get on midway ride.

Holdup Suspect Held

A 28-year-old lower Mainland resident is expected to appear late this week in Victoria Provincial Court on a charge of armed robbery after a holdup Nov. 5 at Saanich Peninsula Credit Union office, 4512 West Saanich.

Saanich police Inspector John Post announced Thursday morning the man was arrested late Wednesday "near Edmonton" by RCMP and was expected to arrive in this area under a Saanich police escort some time Friday.

An unmasked bandit staged the holdup, putting a black pistol on the office counter, taking the money from branch manager Mrs. Lucy Ditlevson and leaving in a car.

First reports said $4,700 was taken in the holdup but later announcements put the loss at $5,005.

A Saanich police artist produced a composite sketch at the time, basing it on descriptions that the man was about 35, five-feet-10, heavy-set and cleanshaven. He was said to weigh about 180 pounds and had "a noticeable stomach," and he was also described as possibly dangerous.

Post said the matter had been under "continuous investigation" and a warrant had been issued recently. There was no indication how the man was found or whether he would appear in court Friday or Saturday.

Easter Seals Forge Ahead

This year's Easter Seal campaign is running about 20 per cent ahead of last year, organizer Ray St. Dennis said Thursday.

He said some $28,000 has been raised so far, towards a $35,000 target.

At this time last year some $23,000 had been collected in a campaign that fell $5,000 short of its $30,000 target.

St. Dennis said more envelopes have been returned this year than before, but the average dollar return is less than previously.

"This is what we are aiming at — more donations giving just what people feel they can afford," he said.

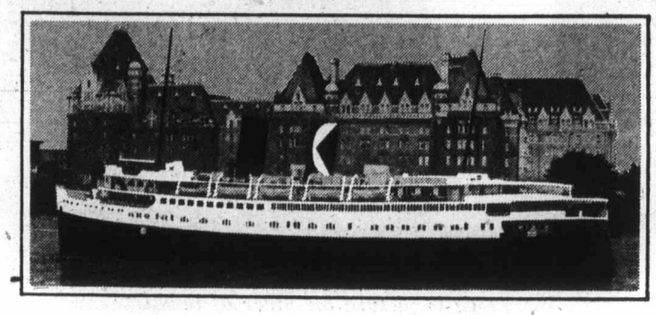

St. Dennis said there was no provincial total availabe yet but University of British Columbia students had come up with a way of donating to the fund which he would like to see copied elsewhere.

Undergraduate engineers he said had raised $8,007 by giving up their 5 per cent rebate on books bought from the university bookstore and returned.

Mazda 1800 Pickup.

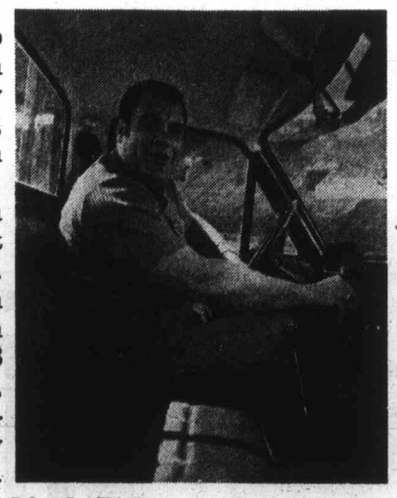

We built it for Angelo Mosca.

We built it bigger and we built it tougher. So even big Angelo Mosca rides easy.

There's room in the cab to relax. We took a 4 inch longer wheelbase than any other truck in the class, and made it all extra cabin space.

Extra headroom. Extra legroom. With a bench seat that slides nearly 5 inches.

And we built it tough for a tough country. With standard equipment like 8 ply rear tires and a longer, wider deck for 3/4 ton payloads. 70 amp/hr. battery with a 420 watt alternator.

Bigger brake drums. Load safety rack. Seat and shoulder safety belts.

Three speed heater.

All synch, four-speed floor mount gearshift.

And a gutsy 1800 cc motor.

Surprising Switch in Tactics

Putting Welfare Onus on B.C.

Hanrahan

PLOY:
Rest homes guest houses by Monday

Gaglardi

ULTIMATUM:
Take patients, pay bills -or eviction

Rest Home Owners Turn In Licences

By DON COLLINS

Greater Victoria rest home operators were reported turning in their licences Thursday night in a surprising switch of tactics aimed at putting the onus for welfare cases directly on the provincial government.

John Hanrahan of Victoria, vice-president of the B.C. Rest Home Association, said the homes would continue strictly as guest houses and that Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi would be given the ultimatum of removing the welfare people or paying extra money for their keep.

"There will not be any eviction now of welfare guests by the rest homes as had been stated," Hanrahan said after an emergency meeting of association members in Greater Victoria.

"By Monday there will be no more rest homes in Victoria," he said. (This did not include rest homes outside the association and association members who might not agree.)

"The members have been turning in their licences to me tonight and these will be turned over to the association's lawyer."

He said he had 45 licences and that he expected more today, along with some from other Vancouver Island points.

What this means, according to Hanrahan, is this:

In addition to the rest home licences, the operators also have guest house licences from the various municipalities, for which they pay from $36 to $100 a year.

They will retain the guest house licences, which he says, allow them to operate much in the manner of hotels — they can pick whom they want as paying guests, but are not responsible for them.

"Gaglardi will receive a letter from the association lawyer and it will state quite clearly that within 48 hours he must either remove the guests who are welfare recipients or pay the full price of $8 a day for older people and $10 for mental health case," Hanrahan said.

Under questioning, he said it was not likely Gaglardi would receive such a letter before Monday or Tuesday. This would mean the 48-hour deadline would not be reached until Wednesday or Thursday.

What happens if Gaglardi refuses to pay any attention to such an ultimatum? Hanrahan was asked.

"There is no other way — he will be bound by law to do so," he said. "If you don't pay your bill at the hotel, what happens? You have to go."

Association members in Greater Victoria had said they would make good their threat to evict the more than 300 welfare residents if the province didn't increase its payment of $150 a month for each case to $185.

Gaglardi had announced $174 would be paid, but the rest home operators said this would only apply in certain cases.

The latest announcement by the association put the finishing touches to a somewhat confusing day in which the operators didn't seem quite clear on what direction they were moving.

It came only about three hours after association president Cliff Wanless, also of Victoria, said the mass eviction would possibly start by today. Earlier in the day he had said it would probably start by next week.

This, however, was prior to the emergency meeting.

Wanless said guests who need the most care — mainly the senile — would be evicted first. All would be transported directly to general hospitals which he said were prepared to receive them.

Adding to the confusion was the fact that the Greater Vancouver members of the association had left Victoria entirely on its own as far as eviction threats were concerned. On Wednesday night the Vancouver rest home operators voted unanimously not to evict welfare people.

Later, branch secretary Mrs. Eileen Sumner said: "We decided to go along with everything the Victoria group has been doing, except the eviction of welfare guests.

"Using human lives to gain your ends hardly seems right."

Wanless said Victoria operators were surprised to learn their counterparts in the Vancouver area were being paid from $195 to $205 a month for each welfare resident.

"Here we are in Victoria asking the government for $185 a month and these people are already getting more than that," he said.

In answer to questions, he said it appeared all money being paid in addition to the $150 a month — or $5 a day — was coming from the various Vancouver-area municipalities.

The Greater Victoria municipalities were not paying anything, he said.

But Victoria welfare administrator Alex Davidson said the municipalities pay 15 per cent of the $150 allotted for each welfare case. He did not know of any agreeing to pay any amount beyond this, though.

Questioned about the reason for the emergency meeting and the switch in plans, Hanrahan said:

"Well, to be quite honest, this whole thing has been causing a great deal of upset among the older people in the homes and among their families. We had to bring this thing to a head."

Wilkinson Jail Clash

Inmate Struck By Prisoner

By BRUCE LOWTHER

A 22-year-old Port Alberni man arrested Wednesday morning in Victoria on a charge of robbery with violence, attacked a fellow prisoner that night in Wilkinson Road provincial jail in Saanich, The Daily Colonist learned Thursday.

Information received from a spokesman in Vancouver for the provincial director of corrections and from other sources was that the inmate who was attacked, Russell Michael Amos, 17, of Victoria, was in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital with minor injuries.

In addition, the person described by the corrections spokesman as the attacker, Norman Edward Ramsey, had been recommended for transfer to Riverview mental hospital on the Lower Mainland.

No Reason

The spokesman said "it would appear" that Ramsey, "who has a mental hsopital history," assaulted Amos by striking him with a metal object shortly after 7:30 p.m. while the two were in the jail infirmary with other inmates and some staff members.

The spokesman said there was "no apparent reason" why Ramsey attacked Amos and added "the assault was quickly broken up by staff and inmate Amos was sent immediately to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment of a broken rib."

A hospital official said Amos did not have a broken rib and had complained of abdominal pain but there was no injury there. However, he said, Amos did have a slight head injury. He described Amos as being in good condition.

Indications were Amos would be returned soon to the prison. He is there on $6,000 bail awaiting trail in a higher court, expected in the fall, on a charge of attempted murder.

Girl Attacked

The charge was laid after Fiona Fay Boucher, 2, of 643 John, suffered a severe head injury and other injuries after an attack in her home on the night of March 4-5. Amos was committed to the higher court by Judge William Ostler after a two-day preliminary hearing May 12 and 13 in Victoria Provincial Court.

Sources told the Colonist the attack in the jail infirmary happened quickly and was over in less than a minute. They said the metal object was a small, round drainhole cover from the infirmary floor.

The sources indicated Amost was struck on the head at least once.

Ramsey appeared Wednesday afternoon before Ostler to hear a charge that he used violence earlier in the day while he stole a newsman's cash apron and its contents of $11.30 from Leonard Alan Pusey.

A doctor brought forward by prosecutor John Macintyre said he thought Ramsey was mentally ill. Asked by Ostler if he wanted to question the doctor, Ramsey said "yeah" and then, turning to the prosecutor, said twice, "What's your name?"

Macintyre suggested a remand to Wilkinson Road for psychiatric treatment rather than to the Eric Martin Institute, which is the usual court procedure in such cases. It was understood this was done as part of a new policy and this was the first time the policy was used.

No Exam

Ostler agreed, suggesting a two-week remand, and sent Ramsey "for observation" to the custody of the warden at Wilkinson Road until 10 a.m. June 2.

Jail authorities referred questions to the corrections branch office in Vancouver and the spokesman there said the papers sending Ramsey to the jail did not specify a psychiatric examination but simply instructed the warden to hold Ramsey and return him June 2.

The spokesman also said Ramsey was not held in solitary confinement after he reached the jail following the court appearance, and added "Ramsey has been recommended for transfer to the Riverview mental hospital."

Plans Inquiries

Victoria lawyer Cecil Branson, defence counsel for Amos, said: "The matter disturbs me and I'm going to make further inquiries."

A police report on newspaper street-salesman Pusey, 49, of 67 Menzies, said he was in the waiting area of the Black Ball ticket office on Wharf Street when a man came up, kicked him three times in the groin and left with Pusey's apron.

The report said a suspect was picked up shortly after at Broughton and Langley after Pusey left in a police car.

It said the man at the waiting area grabbed a mailbag from mailman William Bottem, 2089 Byron, as he left the area and later threw it across the road at Fort and Government — and also grabbed a lunchbag from David Geddes, 3395 Weald, in the 500-Block Fort and threw it to the ground.

Scheske inches across lip of high falls

Deadly Goldstream Spot

Falls Fence May Be Up By Weekend

By BROCK KETCHAM

Paul Scheske gets nervous when anyone ventures too close to the top of the Little Niagara Falls precipice in Goldstream provincial park.

Unpleasant memories are revived. Scheske watched a friend, Herbert Otto Hohaus, 32, of West Germany, plunge over the 170-foot cliff last June 8.

Frank Pretula, 28, of Montreal, fell to his death at the same spot April 20.

Thursday night, Scheske, 40, of 955 Furber, Langford, began drilling holes at the top of the cliff with a rented portable rock drill operated by a gas engine.

With equipment and materials supplied by the B.C. parks branch, Scheske will erect a cable fence across the top of the falls.

Scheske's efforts Thursday night are the result of a campaign he began after two sightseers plunged to their deaths in the canyon in less than a year.

He talked over the danger posed by the unprotected drop at the falls with Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan May 12 and Kiernan agreed some kind of protected viewpoint should be provided at the top of the falls.

Scheske, during his campaign for guardrails, said he would be willing to do the work himself if the government would provide the materials.

In an interview at the falls, Scheske said parks director R. H. Ahrens accompanied him to the site Tuesday night to inspect the danger.

While at the top of the precipice, Scheské said Ahrens unkowingly put himself in great danger.

"(Ahrens) was sort of leaning over the edge and could have gone over any time.

"I was sitting at the top and shaking. I didn't want to yell because he might have been startled.

"After he saw the edge of the waterfall with the moss and algae on the rocks, he decided it needed fencing right away. There's only one way to go if you slip, and that's down," he said.

Scheske expects to have the fence completed tonight. Construction of the fence will be simple. Thursday night, he drilled two holes into each side of the top of the canyon. Eyebolt drift pins will be anchored in the holes and two steel cables will be tightly suspended across the lip of the dropoff.

Reason for urgency of the job? Scheske wants the fence completed before the Victoria Day weekend.

"I expect a lot of people will be going through the area then.

"Most people don't realize the danger until it's too late. The same happened to my friend. He had never been in the wilderness and was quite excited with its beauty," Scheske said.

Cost of the fence, he figures, will be roughly $270. He is being assisted in the project by his son Gerry Scheske, 16, and two friends — Gary Theil, 40, of 2911 Sooke Road, and Rick Larsen, 15, of 2780 Spencer, Langford.

Municipal Affairs Wins B.C. Safety Award

Workmen's Compensation Board Centennial 1971 Safety award will be presented to the municipal affairs department in Victoria. The department completed more than 650,000 accident-free man hours from August 1, 1962 to January 31, 1971.

Store's Loss Heavy

Clothing which Victoria police said was worth more than $12,000 was stolen overnight Wednesday in a break-in at the White House men's wear store at 832 Fort.

Police said the thieves gained entry by punching a hole 12 inches wide and 12 inches long in a gyproc wall covering a window, then smashing the window.

Most of the loss was in suits, including 15 worth $145 each, 34 worth $135 each and 14 worth $125 each for a total of $8,515.

Police also said $60 was stolen from a cashbox after a safe was opened overnight Wednesday in the offices of The Victorian weekly newspaper at 1826 Government.

City Starts Agreements To Prevent Speculation

The practice of taking a developer's proposals at face value went out the window Thursday at Victoria city hall.

To eliminate the possibility of land speculation, the city's lands committee recommended to council that the developer of a proposed $3.1 million project for downtown Victoria be required to enter into a special agreement with the city.

The project in question is to consist of an 18-storey, 178-foot hotel tower containing approximately 200 rooms, an interior shopping mall connecting Government with Wharf, a landscaped outdoor plaza and an indoor swimming pool.

Proposed by the Nordal family of Victoria and a group of local businessmen, the project is to be located on the property bounded by Government, Wharf, Broughton and Courtney.

Plans necessitate the closing of Langley between Broughton and Courtney and the developer is in the process of purchasing that piece of land from the city.

This enables the city to place special covenants on the city-owned property.

If passed by city council (the developer has already agreed to the terms), the agreement would:

- Compel the developer to start construction of "a project valued at no less than $3 million" within three years after the closure of Langley.
- Force the developer to resell that portion of Langley to the city for the same price he paid (a pproximately $25,000).

Moles Jar Friend Too Much

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please tell me why a well-educated, well-travelled, socially prominent, affluent, middle-aged woman who spends a fortune on clothes and a mint of money in the beauty shop is content to go through life with two ugly hair-sprouting moles on her face?

One is about the size of a large pea. The other is nearly as big as a dime.

Whenever I see this woman, I am jarred anew by the sight of her moles although I have known her for several years. I cannot understand her indifference. Is it possible she is unaware of these unsightly growths? Would it be terribly rude of me to suggest that she have them removed? I'd like to hear your opinion on this.—Cape Cod

Dear Cod: Keep quiet. The woman knows the moles are there. If she wanted to do something about them she would. Apparently they do not bother her. And, frankly, they should not bother you that much. I suspect someone in your childhood (a person you didn't like) had hair-sprouting moles, and this is why you are overreacting.

Dear Ann Landers: Who do you think you are that you can call a person insensitive, inconsiderate and sadist just because she telephones a friend in the middle of the night to tell her a mutual acquaintance has died? More often than not the person who makes such a call hates to be the one who breaks the bad news, but someone has to do it.

What about nurses, doctors, police officers? Are these people sadists also? I hope you do better on your next answer. This one was lousy.—Green Bay Reader

Dear Green: Nurses, doctors and police officers must notify the next of kin because it is their professional responsibility to do so. Instructions must be given and decisions must be made. It is up to the family to issue orders.

Please tell me what purpose is served by waking up a person in the middle of the night to inform him that a mutual acquaintance has died? The person who gets the call can do nothing but lose a night's sleep.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter has always been precocious. Beverly could read before she started school and her memory was extraordinary at a very early age. She skipped the first grade and went directly into the second. That was three years ago.

Now the teacher wants Bev to skip the sixth grade and go from the fifth to the seventh. I am against it. The girl would find herself in high school with students who are two and three years older than she. (I forgot to mention that Bev was permitted to start school at age 4½.)

My husband says I am depriving her of an opportunity — that she will be bored if she isn't challenged to learn. He also insists it would be an honor to graduate from high school at 14½. What is your opinion?—Super Smart Can Be Trouble

Dear Su: This is an honor your daughter can live without. The social pressures on a girl who is three years younger than her classmates can produce serious problems.

Brilliance can be a curse if it is not properly channeled. Go to school and talk with the principal. Ask if he can suggest ways to keep the girl intellectually stimulated without advancing her another grade.

Breast Loss Brings Fear

* * *

Radical Surgery Remains Best, Doctor Says

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The drastic surgical procedure used since the turn of the century — removal of the breast and often much of the surrounding muscle and tissue — still is the best way to control breast cancer, according to a New York surgeon.

At the second national conference on breast cancer sponsored by the American Cancer Society, Dr. Jerome Urban, attending surgeon at New York's Memorial Hospital for Cancer, took issue with recent published reports to the contrary.

"Several enthusiastic articles advocating minimal surgery and agressive X-ray therapy for early breast cancers have appeared recently in the press," Urban said.

He said that to save the lives of the maximum number of women, radical or modified radical mastectomies still were the best method.

Urban said that data used to support the minimum surgery theory was biased because a "disproportionate number of patients with minimal lesions and optimal prognosis treated by conservative surgery has been compared with patients with more advanced cases treated by radical surgery."

Urban said, "Such articles serve only to confuse and mislead the public.

"To question radical mastectomies has been surgical heresy," said Dr. Englebert Dunphy of the University if California School of Medicine at San Francisco.

"It is clear that we don't understand the biological origin of cancer of the breast," Dumphy said.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — If a woman can't adjust to the loss of her breast, her surgeon may have done her no favor in saving her life, cancer specialists said Wednesday.

William Markel, vice-president of the American Cancer Society, told doctors attending the second national conference on breast cancer in Los Angeles that "if the patient cannot come to terms with her surgery and get back to a fairly normal life, there is some quesion of the validity of the survival time."

"In our mamary-conscious society, the loss of a breast can be overwhelming," agreed Dr. Harry Goldsmith, a surgeon at Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia. "But the vast majority of women can be rehabilitated physically and emotionally."

He urged a vigorous exercise program to prevent post-operative limitation of arm motion and noted that breast replacemen could be performed in a small number of women unable to adapt to breast loss.

A social worker at Memorial Hospital for Cancer in New York, Roberta Klein, told doctors that a woman who has undergone a mastectomy must face the fact she will never be the same again.

"In order to return to equilibrium, she must do three things," Miss Klein said.

"She must accept the loss of her breast by fully mourning for that loss. She needs to be reassured that grieving for the loss of part of the body is a normal as mourning the loss of a loved one.

"She must re-integrate a self image worthy of love and the rewards of life. She must begin to make peace with the albatross of potential recurrence with which she will have to live."

Miss Klein said the patient should be encouraged to express her fears that no man will ever love her again, anger that this should happen to her and fear she is being punished for previous sins.

"She should not be given false assurances. Rocky marriages have been known to split up following cancer surgery. Employers have been known to fire cancer patients. And breast cancer does recur in a high proportion of women with serious consequences," she said.

A patient with a live, kicking husband has a lot of aces up her sleeve," Miss Klein said. "Usually the widow or spinster is more shattered and needs private counseling."

She said the doctor and social worker should try to alleviate the anxieties of other members of the family, particularly teenage girls who fear the same thing might happen to them.

Alcoholism Co-ordinators

Association's Future Cloudy

By BARBARA McLINTOCK

The future of the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism is in doubt because of dwindling membership, the new government committee administering the drug, alcohol and tobacco rehabilitation fund and possible competition from a rival association, the group learned Wednesday at its annual meeting.

The Association decided to send a delegation from its executive to meet with Education Minister Donald Brothers, who is chairman of the government committee, to discuss the future role the organization can play.

The group does not deal directly with alcoholics, but is a policy-making and co-ordinating body for the many voluntary groups and agencies that are trying to work in the fields of alcoholism prevention and rehabilitation in the Greater Victoria area.

The meeting was told that at present there are only 16 paid-up members, where a few years ago there were about 50.

They were particularly concerned with the possible competition to their organization from a new group being formed in the area, called the Drug, Alcohol and Tobacco Association. This group, which is still only loosely organized, is not registered under the Societies Act.

Acting president John Gough told the meeting the group had been asked by social worker Reg Clarkson to expand its area of activity into the drug and tobacco problems as well as alcohol.

However, the members had voted down this expansion three times on the basis that "including drugs and tobacco is more than one organization could handle."

Gough

The new group DATA was then formed, Gough said.

He said that GVAA executive members had met with a DATA executive member and suggested that DATA — which aims to be an active treatment group — operate under the general aegis of the GVAA. This was being considered by DATA, he said.

However, if DATA set itself up in competition with the GVAA in a co-ordinating role, the new organization "could put the GVAA out of business," members said.

Garth Homer of the Community Council of Greater Victoria told the meeting it was important that agencies working in the same field either merge or co-operate closely to ensure their survival. DATA and the GVAA should need only one administration from what he has heard, he said.

The members were also concerned that with the provincial government taking over the administration of its $25 million perpetual fund for prevention and rehabilitation in drugs, alcohol and tobacco areas there would be little room for a voluntary organization like the GVAA.

Such agencies as the Alcoholism Foundation, the Narcotics Foundation and the Alcohol and Drug Education Council would go directly through Brothers' committee to gain funds, thus eliminating the need for the GVAA as co-ordinator.

New president elected at the meeting is Rev. H. T. Allen. Other officers are first vice-president, M. H. Michael; second vice-president, Don Dobyns; secretary, Hugh Roberts; treasurer, Dr. A. N. Beattie and past president, Lynden Bell.

Women May Be Full Citizens, But Rights 'Difficult' To Claim

EDMONTON (CP) — It is extremely difficult for women to exercise full rights as citizens — simply because they are women, Bernard Ostry, assistant undersecretary of state, said Wednesday.

Ostry, of Ottawa, was addressing a luncheon meeting of the National Council of Jewish Women, which is holding a biennial meeting this week.

"Women are full citizens," he said. But the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women showed that women were, however, unable to enjoy the inalienable rights as citizens.

When the government takes action on the report, he said, he expects that his branch on citizenship will have a major responsibility in implementing some of the actions.

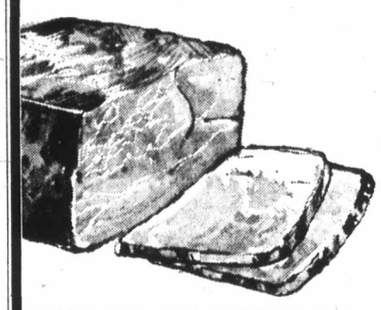

"When this occurs, will you help us?" he asked the delegates of the 5,000-member organization.

Many women as well as men still regard the woman as an inferior, he said. The rights of the woman as a whole citizen are opposed by male chauvinists, and not all women agree with the women liberationists.

The debate is not over, he said, but he added that it still is "extremely difficult for women to exercise their full rights as citizens.

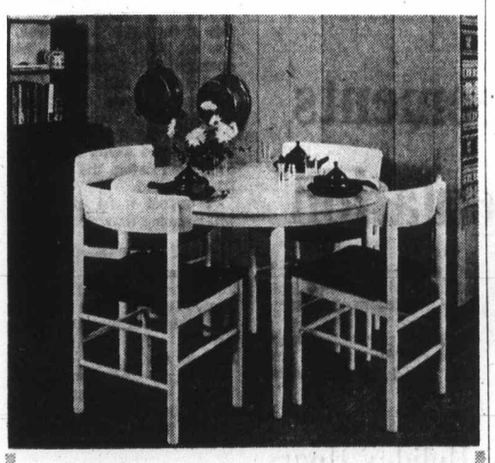

"Despite reforms that are about to come into effect," he said, women still have "a long way to go in the struggle for equality."

Autism Follows Rubella's Wake

TORONTO (CP) — A New York doctor has discovered that German measles causes some forms of a severe childhood condition, autism, long regarded as a psychiatric problem, an international conference on rubella was told this week.

Dr. Louis Cooper of New York University School of Medicine called the discovery made recently by a colleague, Dr. Stella Chass, exciting because it opens the way for prevention of some infant autism, by preventing rubella infection.

Later, Cooper said the most serious problems caused when a mother contracts rubella, the scientific name for German measles, in the first three months of pregnancy are those related to the brain of the infant.

The baby can be born mentally retarded, blind, deaf of with heart or other malformations, he said.

Autistic infants are children who from birth are withdrawn and unable to relate to people.

Dr. Dennis Vince of Vancouver told the conference young women should ask their doctors to vaccinate them against rubella before their first pregnancy to prevent possible defects to their unborn babies.

OOOOH, NOOOOO says Christine Long, 5, of Waterford, Conn., faced with rubella vaccine gun in program to prevent spread of disease and malformed babies caused by rubella during pregnancy.—(AP)

Ball Cancelled

The Fort Victoria Military Ball planned for May 29 at the Bay Street Armory appeared Thursday to be the most popular of all dances planned for the Victoria Days celebrations.

Maj. Dick Talbot, dance committee chairman, said he expects more than 1,000 tickets to be sold for the ball which will wind up the Victorian Days week.

"Currently I think we have sold between 700 and 800 tickets."

He explained that the tickets were $5 a couple and the buffet lunch tickets will be $1.50 each.

"If they don't want to buy lunch they can eat before they come," he observed.

However, on the other side of the picture, the Victorian Days $25 a couple inaugural ball planned for tonight at the Empress has been cancelled because of poor ticket sales.

Mike Page, Victorian Days Society spokesman said ticket sales for two other balls planned during the week appear to be going ahead. One is the Victoria Arts Society ball at UVic on Monday night and the other is the Esquimalt-Victoria Days dance at the Esquimalt Sports Centre on May 27.

Page explained that the inaugural ball was not an Empress Hotel affair.

The hotel was asked earlier by the Victorian Days Society if it could stage the opening dance there and the management agreed, he said.

He said that he believed the lack of ticket sales for the inaugural ball was because there is so much going on during the week.

Page said that he understood only 11 tickets were sold out of an expected 100.

St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society has also scheduled a Scottish Centennial Ball at Holyrood House May 29, where kilts and centennial costumes will be worn, and traditional Scottish dances will mix with usual dance music, and a buffet dinner will be served.

Other Victorian Day celebrations are scheduled at 3 p.m. Sunday with the crowning of the May Queen by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock. Bellevue high school band will also present a concert. Both events will be in Centennial Square.

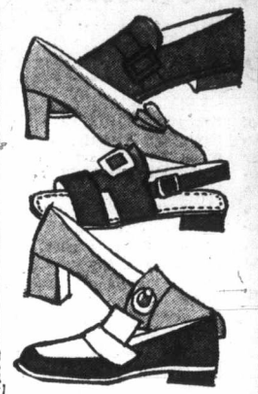

The May Queen, chosen by mayors from Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Central Saanich, is Judy Heslegrave, 17, of Reynolds high school. Her princesses are Jill Trim, 18, of Victoria high, and Dale McKenzie, 16, of Mount Douglas high.

BEESTON, England (CP) — A ghost wearing working togs is scaring the 20 telephonists on nightshift at a telephone switchboard exchange. But the phantom only drops in on pay days, one of the girls noted. "He could be trying to collect his wages," said an official of the Nottingham centre.

VICTORIAN NURSES

The Victoria branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses made 394 fewer house visits in April than in March, the board of management of the order was told last week.

□

Lillain Randall, the district director, told the board at its regular meeting that 2,057 visits were made in April compared to 2,451 in March.

Reason for the decrease, she said, was that several patients who had been receiving two or more visits a day had gone into hospital, and also that some staff members had been ill.

The board was also told that the resignation of June Nickson, the physio-occupational therapist, had been accepted with regret and that it was hoped a replacement would soon be found.

President Mrs. G. A. Jones announced the annual meeting of the B.C. Victorian Order of Nurses would be held in North Vancouver on May 27.

The Oak Bay Business and Professional Women's Club has elected Rosanne Barrett as president.

Other new officers are Flora Weicker, vice-president; Geraldine Simpson, treasurer; Frances Browne, corresponding secretary; Pearl Hutchinson, recording secretary, and Pat Chilton, Hollie Holmead and Doris Bedard, directors.

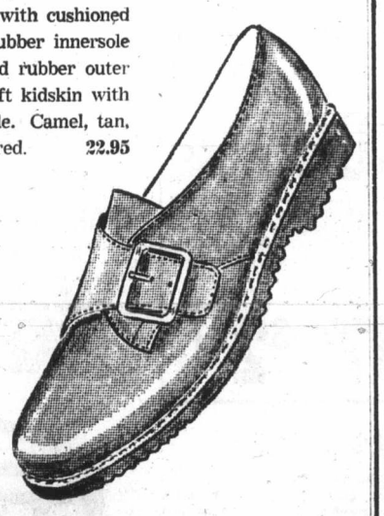

Half And Half

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $52 grant was approved by city council after the Status of Women Action and Co-ordinating Council asked for $210 to hold a public meeting May 31 in the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse. Asked why taxpayers should pay for the meeting, a spokesman replied, "because half the taxpayers of Vancouver are women."

Anderson Warns Cabinet:

Don't Hide Facts

David Anderson says Conservatives and New Democratic party members of parliament are incompetent and only Liberal backbenchers can provide the criticism and policy discussion which the country expects from the commons.

Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, in an article in the current issue of B.C. Liberal, also criticizes the withholding of information by cabinet ministers.

B.C. Liberal is published every two months by the party in British Columbia.

Under the title A Time for Reflection, Anderson says the attitudes of the years of minority Liberal governments are still prevalent.

"Prior to 1968, debate between Liberals could damage the government and, indeed, could even defeat it," he says.

But today things are different. We now have a substantial majority, which we have had for three years. Public discussion on policy matters does not weaken the government . . .

"Given the incompetence of the Tory and NDP parties in the House of Commons, only the Liberal backbencher can provide the criticism and policy discussion which the country expects from Parliament.

"To allow the attitudes of the minority government years to continue on during the present parliament is to misuse the majority Mr. Trudeau was given in 1968."

Anderson says MPs, Liberal party members and the public are unlikely to have much effect on government decision-making if information on which decisions are made is withheld.

Petition Aiming At Foreign Cash

More than 100 members of the Victoria Committee for an Independent Canada will try to get 5,000 signatures Saturday for a petition asking the federal government to take a serious stand on foreign economic domination in Canada, chairman of the Victoria group said.

Peter Kuzaan said 14 petition stations will be set up throughout Victoria, some of which will be on Douglas, while the rest will be in Mayfair, Town and Country, University Heights shopping centres.

The petition is part of a national plan by the group which intends to present Prime Minister Trudeau with the signatures in about five weeks.

He said the Victoria branch has collected 1,800 signatures while there has been 175,000 signatures collected across Canada.

'Holdup Note' Alerts Police

Victoria police checked the Bank of Montreal at Yates and Douglas after a possible holdup note was found by an employee at 2:40 p.m. Tuesday, but all remained quiet.

The note contained what looked like doodling and words similar to "This is a holdup." Two policemen stayed on guard in the bank until closing time.

Clinic Needs More Donors

A two-day blood donor clinic, held in the Red Cross House, Fort Street, Monday and Tuesday drew a total of 190 donors, it was reported Tuesday. The cilinc had hoped for 250 donors.

The next clinic will be held at Royal Roads military college from 2 to 4:30 p.m. May 31.

Ginter To Speak To Chamber

Ben Ginter, president of Uncle Ben's Tartan Breweries, will speak on his experience with "monopolies, combines, Mafias, protection rackets by government and big business," at a meeting of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce to be held at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday at the New Old Forge.

Council Protest Unanimous

Haddock Condemns Amchitka Blast Plan

Regardless of how safe a nuclear test blast is made out to be, there shouldn't be any such tests, Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock said Thursday.

"It's high time people start taking an interest in what's happening in the world," the mayor told a meeting of the city's Group A committee.

A few weeks ago, Haddock said he wasn't alarmed by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's plan for a five-megaton nuclear underground blast to be set off on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians in October.

He had to go along with the scientists who claimed there was no danger, the mayor said at that time.

Following his statements Thursday, committee recommended unanimously that council pass a resolution protesting the planned test.

Hind

Council has been asked to be "more selective" in permitting car raffles and other promotional activities in the Broad Street mall.

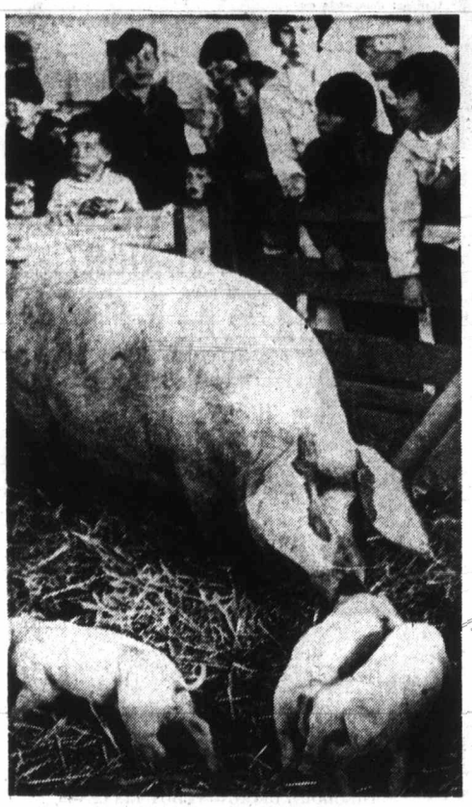

Reg Hind, manager of the T. Eaton Co., said in a letter that the mall had been virtually "inundated with the raffling of automobiles" since former city manager Dennis Young left the city's employ.

"At the time of inception (of the mall) it was agreed with the city manager that no commercialism of any kind would take place in this public area and he personally discouraged any fund-raising schemes," the letter said.

Committee received the letter as information and instructed City Manager Bill Hooson to "keep and eye on the situation" for the next four weeks, and report back to the committee.

The mall, located on Broad between View and Fort, is still a city street which was closed in March 1969 to speed traffic flow on Fort.

Recently, the city has granted permission to a number of organizations to hold car raffles in the mall area.

Choppers Land At Fair

Everyone likes white teeth.

Hopefully the person who lost his, or her dentures at the Jaycee fair will miss them enough to pick them up at the general office, fair manager Norm McLaren said Thursday.

McLaren said the dentures, wrapped in white paper, were turned into his office Monday night.

"We hope the person is not too embarrassed to come down and claim them," he said.

Workshop On Seeds At Saanich

A two-day forestry workshop dealing with seed production for reforestation programs ends today at the Forest Research laboratory on Burnside Road, Saanich.

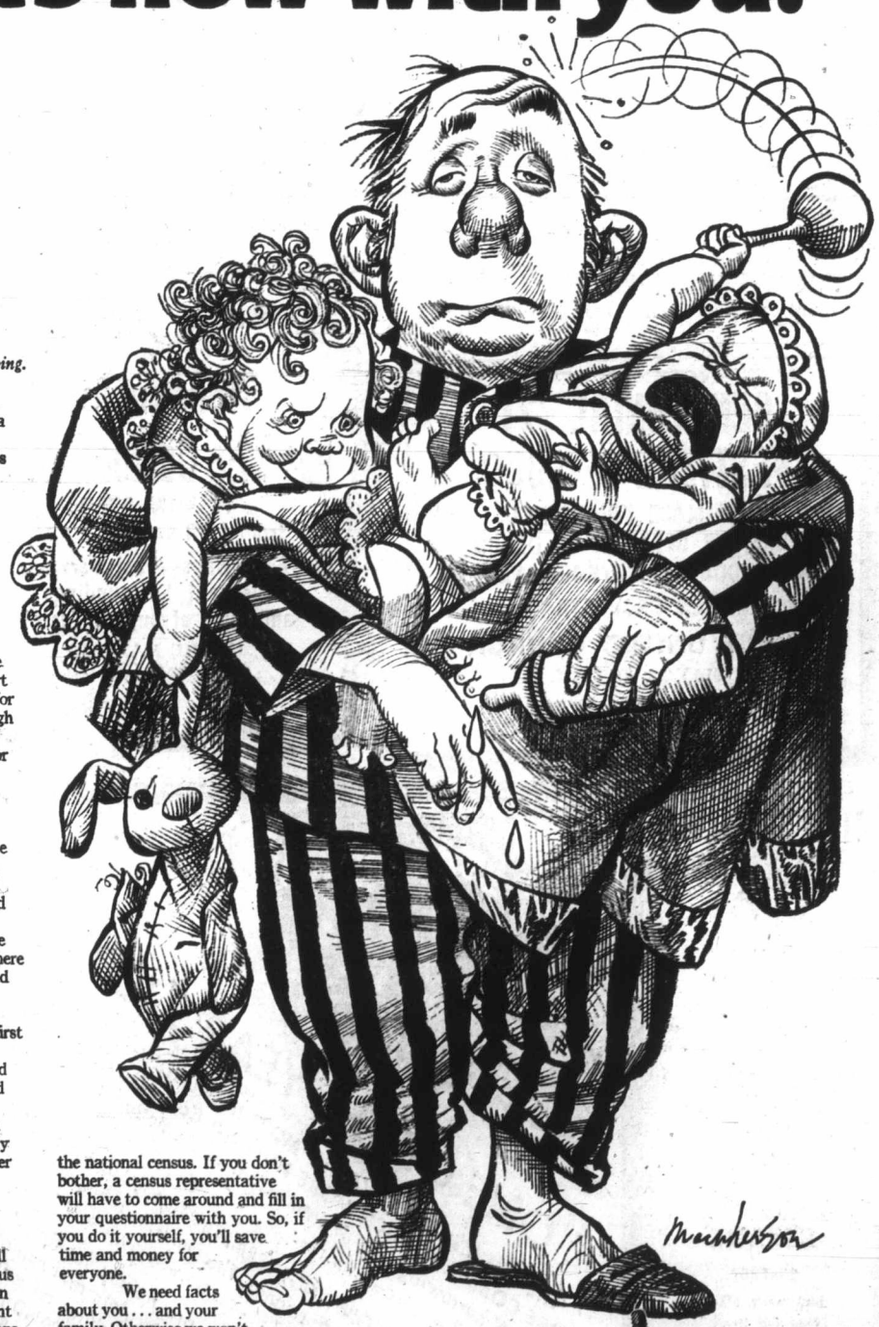

Two Victoria scientists are among the 30 specialists attending the workshop. They are J. C. Heaman of the B.C. Forest Service and Dr. John Owens from the University of Victoria.

Other members are from B.C., Alberta, eastern Canada and the United States.

Discussions deal with current methods used in seed production and their effectiveness and if any new methods should be attempted.

June 1 is Census Day. What's new with you?

This is your chance to tell Canada who you are and how you're doing.

Census day is almost like voting day. It's your right and privilege. Your chance to let Canada know all about yourself and your family. How and where you live. It's as secret as the ballot. All these facts become statistics. And many organizations use them to plan for our future.

This is how governments know where to spend money for the most necessary things: hospitals, schools, housing projects, roads and highways, community centres, parks. For example, a high percentage of children under five in one section of your community may alert the board of education to the need for a new school. Or, districts with a high proportion of sub-standard housing may be identified and ear marked for urban renewal and development programs. Things like that.

It's a do-it-yourself census.

Any day now, you'll receive your census questionnaire. The idea is that everyone in Canada must fill in that form on June 1. If a pre-paid return envelope came with the population census form complete the questionnaire and mail it back. If there is no envelope, don't mail it but hold the form until it is picked up by a census representative.

This will probably be the first time you've ever had the chance to fill in your own census form. The old way of sending census takers around knocking on doors and asking you questions served a useful purpose in its day. But we've found, after many trial censuses, that people do a better job when they fill in their questionnaires themselves.

If you are a farm operator.

If you have a farm you will also be required to complete a Census of Agriculture form. The information you give is important for government farm programs and farm organizations in the years ahead.

What happens if somebody doesn't fill in his census form?

Everyone in Canada is required by law to be counted in the national census. If you don't bother, a census representative will have to come around and fill in your questionnaire with you. So, if you do it yourself, you'll save time and money for everyone.

We need facts about you . . . and your family. Otherwise we won't have the whole story.

Give a few minutes to the Census of Canada. And Canada will give you a better future.

It's your census. Everyone has the right to be counted. Everyone has the right to expect the information he gives to be treated in absolute confidence. And you can be sure that the information will be used for the good of all Canadians.

So, don't forget. June 1. Tell us what's new.

Count yourself in.

Lenny Plays Lack Offstage Laughs

Order Blocks Performance

During his lifetime, Lenny Bruce was never far from controversy. Now, nearly eight years after his death, controversy continues to swirl around his name.

Two stage productions based on the comedian-satirist's life and words — both called Lenny — have been announced for this month. One was to have premiered last Friday at the off-Broadway Village Gate. The other is at the Brooks Akinson theatre on Broadway and opens officially May 26. The producers of the broadway Lenny have obtained a temporary restraining order blocking public performances and publicity of the off-broadway Lenny and have applied for an injunction in U.S. district court.

Lenny Bruce, who was in and out of courts during most of his performing career, might have found the whole thing ironically amusing, but nobody connected with either Lenny is laughing very hard. The producers of the Broadway version, Michael Butler, Jules Fisher and Marvin Worth, say their show is based in large part on the copyrighted book The Essential Lenny Bruce, to which they own the stage rights. Fred Baker, who wrote and directed the off-Broadway version, says he did research for a film documentary about Bruce before publication of the book and that he retained theatrical rights to the research material. Baker also says he completed a Bruce play in 1968 utilizing his research.

To complicate things further, there was an earlier dispute over movie rights involving some of the same people. Baker's star, Bernie Travis, portrayed Bruce in a movie called Dirtymouth, which has yet to be released because of the squabble. Tom O'Horgan (director-composer), Julian Barry (writer) and Worth (co-producer) of the broadway Lenny decided on a stage version only after their projected movie was delayed.

O'Horgan was hurrying the other day from a rehearsal. Along the way — in the cab, at the theater and at a dinner eaten in haste so he could spend the evening rehearsing — he spoke about Bruce and his relevance to 1971.

"After 10 years," O'Horgan said, "We're still not ready for what he's about, the truths he was trying to put down. It was never more necessary than now to hear what the man had to say about the suppression of the word. It seems evident that we're headed back to a Joe McCarthy period."

O'Horgan, who wears his hair beyond shoulder length and his clothes hippie-casual, did his own bit to break down taboos involving language, and nudity as well, with the stage shows Futz! and Hair, which he directed. "I'm obligated to Lenny Bruce," he said. "Things like Hair and Futz! could never have been done if Lenny hadn't paid the dues."

The director-producer knew Bruce during his own performaing days as a harpist and absurd humorist. "He was a compulsive truth teller," O'Horgan said. "That was his problem. He told the truth about himself as well. He told the truth about religion and it probably got him in more trouble than anything else."

Bruce, born Leonard Alfred Schneider in Mineola, was arrested several times for obscenity and narcotics. Those who detested his night-club riducule of religion, motherhood, politics, law and public figures found him merely obscene. To his admirers — including many persons prominent in the arts and education — he was a social satirist "in the tradition of Swift, Rabelais and Twain."

The play, with O'Horgan's music employed somewhat like a film score, will cover Bruce's life from the early 1950s to his death at the age of 40 on Aug. 3, 1966. Bruce is played by Cliff Gorman, who won acclaim in "The Boys in the Band."

The show is directly across the street from O'Horgan's first broadway venture, Hair, and like the musical it may find an audience among the young. O'Horgan has found that a number of young people are aware of Bruce although they are unfamiliar with his material.

Cosby Skips School For New Program

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby's exit from television will be short-lived — he signed Wednesday with CBS for a one-hour comedy series beginning in September, 1972.

Cosby, who quit his NBC situation comedy series to return to college, is the first major figure to sign with CBS for the 1972-73 season.

Rock Festival Opposed By Township

MADOC, Ont. (CP) — Retired farmer James Quinlan plans to celebrate his 40th wedding anniversary with a three-day rock festival.

While the township council is busy passing bylaws to stop the festival, the Quinlan family is hoping the Rock Acres Peace Festival will attract 50,000 persons to their 200-acre farm near this community 30 miles north of Belleville.

Quinlan, 66, was planning his anniversary celebration last September when the family got the idea for the festival. The anniversary date is June 24 but Quinlan pushed the celebration back to July 3, 4 and 5.

Madoc township council acted quickly. In April it passed a "festival bylaw" requiring, among other things, a $200,000 public liability bond.

When the Quinlans said they would go ahead with the festival anyway, council Saturday passed another prohibiting use of land in the township for anything other than what it is zoned for.

Quinlan says the bylaw is illegal.

The family says about half the 11,000 advance tickets have sold at $10 apiece. It says it has a contract with about 20 Canadian bands including Lighthouse and Crowbar.

Quinlan says the family is hiring 30 off-duty police to patrol their grounds in three shifts.

Of possible nudity, he says, "They aren't going to keep their pants off long around here — the blackflies will take care of that."

Quinlan's wife Margaret is only worried about one thing, the rock music. She wants her husband to take over one of the two stages and play a country music concert "for us old folks."

9 IN MEMORIAM

BUNCE — In loving memory of Edward A. Bunce, who passed away May 21, 1970.
One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home — it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

How a pressure group works:

Fourteen members of the staff of NET's Sesame Street recently agreed to travel from various parts of the U.S. to San Antonio, Texas, for a meeting with a nationwide caucus of Spanish-speaking groups. The idea was to discuss Sesame Street plans to become bilingual.

When the Streeters reached San Antonio, they were told there would be no meeting. Instead, the caucus had issued a statement demanding the authority to produce all bilingual Sesame shows. Otherwise, said the statement, there would be legal action,and foundations and U.S. federal agencies would be asked to withhold Sesame funds until caucus demands were met.

It's not likely to work, but the threat could kill an excellent show that children need and enjoy. A pressure group would win — or would it?

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer — Nearing the end of linked-namers, Chapter Umpteen included Alan Ladd, actor; Babe Didrickson Zaharias, athlete; Julia Child, cook; Michael Kidd, dancer-choreographer, and Boyd Neel, composer-conductor. Julia Child definitely is NOT an actress.

Today's question is the same old stupidity. The occupations, please, of Sterling Hayden, Carl Nickel, Harry Gold and a former Victorian named Gem Mortimore. And where do you find Silver? Under the Lone Ranger. Answers Saturday.

"While Ron Santo is trying to find the handle on that hot grounder off the bat of Harmon Killebrew, let's listen to this important message . . ."

Friday Highlights

8:30 p.m. — NET Playhouse's biography is of Dante Gabriel Rossetti with Oliver Reed, the musical Bill Sykes, as the hero — 9.

C-10:00 — Venice Be Damned is a special that should interest those who like art and dislike pollution — 5.

CABLE 10—7:00 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30, Project Travel; 8:30, Outdoorsmen, gardening; 9:00, a film called Two-Stroke Engine; 9:30, B.C. Trails. And note there will be no Cable 10 on the holiday Monday.

Friday Movies

9:00 a.m.—Bannerline (nauseating 1951 reporter-vs.-baddies), Keefe Brasselle, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis Stone. The only good newspaper movie has yet to be made, and may never be—4.

C-12:45 noon—Pardners (1956 Martin and Lewis). One of their best—6, 8.

C-4:00 p.m.—The Cossacks (dreadful 1960 dubber), Edmund Purdom. Nobody wins, especially the viewer—7.

4:30—Girl from Monterey (1943 garbage)—13.

5:30—The Lawless (1950 bigotry drama, aging but still good), Macdonald Carey. Sort of early Caesar Chavez—12.

7:30—Emergency Landing (1941 crackup)—13.

C-8:00—Man Called Adam (fairly good 1966 trumpeter drama), Sammy Davis, Louis Armstrong, Ossie Davis, Peter Lawford. A bit heavy but the acting is good and the music's better—8.

C-9:00—The Cool Ones (1967 show-biz drama, very uncool), Roddy McDowall, Phil Harris, other losers—7, 12.

11:00—Monster of Piedras Blancas (1957 no-names sci-fi stinker). I'm told piedras blancas is Mexican for white shoes, alias Pat Boone—13.

C-11:05—Mary Mary (1963 comic disaster), Debbie Reynolds. You will find it quite contrary—12.

11:30—Strange Door (1951 Karloff vs. Laughton). Horror fun time—7.

11:50—The Woman Who Wouldn't Die (1965 horror, no fun at all), Gary Merrill and other littlies—2.

C-12:00—Man Called Adam (see 8:00)—6.

C-12:00—Angry Red Planet (1960 sci-fi cheapo). Gerald Mohr is the star so you can pretty well figure it as lousy—8.

1:00 a.m.—Malaya (1950 war action). One of the worst films for Spencer Tracy, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Sydney Greenstreet and everyone else, including you—4.

● 1:30—The Killers (1946 Hemingway, expanded by Hellinger), Burt Lancaster, Ava Gardner, many more familiar faces. Sometimes good, sometimes better—12.

1:45—Murders in the Rue Morgue (1932 Lugosi). It's not Poe but it's amusing from 39 years later—7.

Friday Radio

8:00 p.m.—The FM debut of a six-part series about conductor Sir Adrian Boult—CBU-FM (105.7).

8:05—Gala is mostly Pictures at An Exhibition by Moussorgsky, so get the stereo ready—CFMS (98.5).

●—Recommended; C—Color.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

Vul: E-W	NORTH
	♠ Q 9 2
	♡ K 8 4
	◊ 9 8 4 2
	♣ 7 4 2
WEST		EAST
♠ 8 7 4		♠ 5 3
♡ A J 3		♡ Q 10 6 5 2
◊ K Q J 5		◊ A 10 7 3
♣ J 9 3		♣ Q 10
	SOUTH (D)
	♠ A K J 10 6
	♡ 9 7
	◊ 6
	♣ A K 8 6 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◊	Pass	2 ◊
2 ♠	Pass	Pass	3 ◊
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	All Pass

Opening lead: King of ◊.

Sometimes, when tackling a suit contract it's by no means easy to decide whether to draw trumps or not.

Take this deal, where diamonds are led and you ruff the second one. It would be the simplest thing in the world to draw trumps, (they happen to break 3-2, but what would you do then?

The best you could do would be to duck a club. The opponents would return a diamond, forcing your last trump. You could cash your clubs, but West would be nasty enough to throw away the J-3 of hearts, and when eventually you led a heart he would have the ace of hearts and a winning diamond as his last two cards.

This unsatisfactory outcome can be avoided. You cannot make the contract unless the king of hearts is a trick, so at trick three you should lead one.

The best West can do is to take the ace and return a diamond. You ruff, cash the A-K of trumps, and duck a club.

If a diamond is returned, you ruff with your last trump, cross to the king of hearts, and draw West's last trump with dummy's queen. Then you cash your clubs and make a well-played, if lucky, contract.

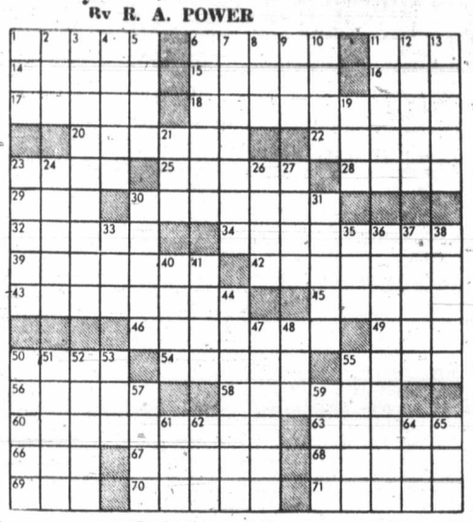

How can you be sure that this is the right line of play? You can't — but it's generally a sound principle, if the outcome of a hand is uncertain, to go about the business of establishing your tricks before drawing trumps.

Indian Police Force Chosen for Province

Creation of an all-Indian police force in B.C. has drawn favorable reaction from the Indian community on Vancouver Island.

Eight native Indians, ranging in age from 22 to 47 will be sworn in today at the legislative buildings in Victoria by RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham. The force is being formed under the federal Police Act.

Chief Lawrence Lewis of the Cape Mudge band on Quadra Island, said the people on his reserve were in favor of the move.

He told the Colonist Thursday night it was "a step in the right direction."

"Having Indian constables will be particularly good in isolated areas. It will help in policing the reserves, especially today when people are so mobile," said Lewis.

"We are on an island here, and having our own constable will mean we have more control on the reserve."

He explained that after the last run of the ferry at night, it was impossible for an RCMP officer to handle anything that came up on the reserve unless "he had his own boat."

Two Island reserves will have their own constables, with J. A. Wilson being posted to Cape Mudge and L. W. Joe to the Cowichan band near Duncan.

The eight men have come from locations in B.C. as remote as four miles from the Alaska border. Following today's swearing-in, they will undergo a nine-day crash course at the RCMP training academy in Victoria.

They will then spend one month in on-the-job training with the RCMP detachment nearest their home reserve, then will become, in effect, the police chiefs of their reserves.

They will be responsible to their band council and chief.

These pioneers in Indian policing will be the nucleus, and the pilot project for police service that eventually will be extended to most of the major reserves of the province, officials said. The eight will serve a total of 6,400 native people on the reserves.

The program was arranged by Indian Affairs and the federal attorney-general departments, to enforce, not only band bylaws, but the Criminal Code, in conjunction with RCMP in adjacent detachments.

The other six special constables are, C. Shaw, Kitimat; D. M. Wilson, Bella Bella; F. F. Davis, New Aiyansh; D. A. Price, Port Simpson; A. Angus, Greenville; and F. S. Doolan, Kincolith.

Ferries Use Bay As Sewer

DUNCAN — B.C. Ferries were using Departure Bay at Nanaimo as a holding tank, charged Cowichan-Malahat MLA, Robert Strachan Thursday night.

Strachan told a meeting of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) that Departure Bay was an example of the failure of government pollution policy.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark had urged pleasure boat owners to install holding tanks for sewage on their boats, yet B.C. Ferries were using Departure Bay as their holding tank, he said.

"Their (B.C. government) basic policy is too see how much pollution the water, air, and soil can take." Strachan added: "I think the approach instead should be to establish and maintain clean air, clean water and a good earth."

He was one of two representatives of political parties who attended the meeting at the invitation of SPEC branch president Kurt Horn.

Strachan and Doug Stewart, of the Cowichan-Malahat Liberal Party both disapproved of the provincial government's pollution policy.

Horn told members that he had invited representatives from each of the three major political parties in the area to give society members their views on present government policy and the policy of their own party towards pollution.

"Of the three I invited, only Charles Ennals, the Social Credit representative, was unable to attend," Horn said. He quoted Ennals as saying that the three weeks notice of the meeting was "not sufficient time" to prepare a statement.

Stewart echoed Strachan in the belief that "change will have to come".

He told society members that pollution measures were the top priority of his party.

Sister Matilda Leaving

COURTENAY — A dinner and presentation highlighted the annual meeting of the Vancouver Island area hospital council, which met in Parksville last weekend.

During the dinner a Dogwood plaque was presented to sister Matilda, administrator, St Jospeh's Hospital, Comox. She has been secretary to the council for some years and will be leaving Comox in the near future for new duties in Toronto.

Elected to the executive for the coming year were: Wilf Wunderlisk, trustee, Chemainus Hospital, chairman; Gordon Mason, board chairman, Campbell River Hospital, vice-chairman; Ernie Dickson, administrator, Chemainus Hospital, secretary-treasurer; William Morrison, Administrator, Gorge Road Hospital, Victoria, past chairman.

Other board members: F. S. Whittington, administrator, West Coast Hospital, Port Alberni; Ben Benwell, trustee, Nanaimo Hospital; Ken Noton, administrator, Cowichan Hospital, and remaining on the board for the coming year, Dr. A. J. Wood, St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria.

Indian Municipality First

Cape Mudge Move Formally Approved

The B.C. cabinet Thursday gave formal approval to an agreement with the federal government allowing the Indians of Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to form Canada's first Indian municipality.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said, however, he hasn't yet received any word that the agreement signed by a senior official of the department of Indian affairs has been given federal ministerial approval.

The agreement will form the basis of an incorporation vote which is expected to be taken among Cape Mudge residents sometime this fall. It will have to be approved by a 75 per cent majority.

Squatters Spared

UCLUELET — About 200 beach squatters at Pacific Rim National Park have been told by the park superintendent they will be allowed to remain until the end of the summer.

Superintendent George Trachuck said no attempt will be made this summer to clear out any shelters erected by the squatters, most of whom are transient young people.

Parksville Eyes Tourist Influx

PARKSVILLE — A Parksville tourist bureau will be open for the Victoria Day holiday weekend. Mrs. H. L. S. McCulloch, Miss Ruby Ann Blower, and Miss Cathy Labelle were chosen from about 40 applicants, to staff the bureau. Parksville Chamber of Commerce has made a grant of $2,000 for the project but more support is needed if the bureau is to stay open all summer.

Odds

VANCOUVER — A Nanaimo man who lost both arms in a 1964 pulp mill accident and later earned a degree from the University of Victoria, helped open a three-storey addition to the Workmen's Compensation Board building Tuesday.

Allan Brett, who now holds a personnel office job with MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., and Judge C. W. Tysoe of the B.C. Appeal Court cut the ribbon to open the 65,000-square-foot addition.

Braves' New World

DUNCAN—Cowichan Indian band is growing grapes which will eventually find their way as wine to the B.C. market. The project, in cooperation with the federal agriculture department and Growers' Wine Co. of Victoria, was started a year ago.

The new band vineyard is located just north of here. The grapes will be purchased by Growers'.

Italy Ousted

TERNI, Italy (Reuter) — East Germany beat Italy, 1-0, in their second leg Olympic soccer match here Thursday night to qualify for the next round on a 5-0 aggregate.

Dallas Trades One Lance, Gets Another

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League have traded flanker-back Lance Rentzel to Los Angeles Rams Wednesday in a series of trades in which tight-end Pettis Norman and tackle Tony Liscio and Ron East also left the Cowboys.

Rentzel was traded to the Rams for tight-end Billy Truax and wide-receiver Wendell Tucker.

Norman, Liscio and East went to San Diego Chargers for wide-receiver Lance Alworth.

Alworth is ranked seventh among leading lifetime receivers. He has a record of 493 catches and 9584 yards 81 touchdowns in his nine-year career.

Car-Truck Smash Kills One

PARKSVILLE — One man was killed and a female companion was in serious condition in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria Thursday night as a result of a collision between a car and a pickup truck one mile north of Parksville about 5 p.m. Thursday.

Killed was Richard Whitley, 19, of Parksville, driver of the small car.

Qualicum RCMP said the woman was taken to Nanaimo Regional Hospital and transferred at 10:30 p.m. to St. Joseph's Hospital with "serious" injuries.

The Big Switch

One of the important jobs to be tackled around this time of the year is the clearing out of the spring-flowering plants in the flower beds, replacing them with summer-blooming annuals.

It requires a well-developed sense of timing to decide just the best time to get cracking on this operation, for if you clear the beds too soon, you fail to collect full dividends from your tulips or wallflowers. If you leave it too late, your nurseryman or plant dealer may be sold out of the particular bedding plants you want.

What do you do with the old plants removed from the beds? This depends on what kind of plants you grew. English and Siberian wallflowers are seldom worth keeping for another year, and as they are cabbage-relatives and therefore capable of perpetuating the dreaded club root disease, they should go to an actively fermenting compost heap or to the incinerator.

Tulips and daffs pose the biggest problem. Ideally, these plants should really be allowed to stay where they are, undistrubed, to ripen their foliage and plump up their bulbs for next year's display, and the topgrowth shouldn't be cut down nor the bulbs taken up and stored until the leaves have died down naturally. This may take a month or more yet.

One solution is to leave the bulbs where they are to complete their growth, and interplant with tallish annual bedding plants in such a way that the new plants conceal the untidy dying foliage of the bulbs.

This works well if done only on occasional years, but it gives you no opportunity to dig over and enrich the bed. The bulbs, too, will deteriorate gradually unless taken up at least every third year to be dried and sorted and stored through the summer.

Probably the best method is to take up the bulbs in full growth with a good ball of soil around their roots and transplant them carefully to a row in the vegetable garden in the backyard to complete their growth.

The garden books call this "heeling in," which to me has the connotation of chucking the bulbs carelessly into a furrow and kicking some dirt in over the roots.

Such offhand treatment will cause your daffs and tulips to die down much earlier than they should, before their growth cycle is completed. Instead, transplant as carefully and as lovingly as if you were handling a delphinium or a phlox.

If you have grown forget-me-nots as a filler between your tulips or wallflowers, when you pull them up, don't chuck them on the compost heap. Instead, scatter the uprooted plants on a freshly raked bit of ground in the shade of one of your shrubs.

You see, the forget-me-not has the happy faculty of ripening and shedding its seeds even after being uprooted, and by late summer you will have hundreds of self-sown seedlings springing up, ready for transplanting.

Polyanthus primroses are good for another display next spring, but they need a period of rest and recuperation after the strain of flowering, and they need to get out of strong sunshine for the summer months.

These plants should be lifted carefully from their sunny spring quarters, taking a substantial ball of soil around the roots, and transplanted to a shaded bed.

This shouldn't be a gloomy kind of shade, as from low, overhanging tree branches, but either an open position on the north side of a wall, or in a woodland glade dappled with spots of sunshine filtering the leaves of high branches. The soil should be moist and woodsy, rich in leafmould.

With a mixed bag of polyanthus plants, it pays to be a bit fussy as to which plants are saved and which are given the old heave-ho. Out of any given batch of seedlings, there should be a proportion of really fine plants, with big florets and glowing, rich colors.

By the same token, there is bound to be a certain amount of sheer junk — plants which aren't fit even to be given away to the neighbours — with harsh or wishy-washy colors.

These poor relations are best consigned to the compost heap. The good-enough types are planted out in their summer rest camp, watering them in carefully with Transplantone or Alginure or Dixon-Reid vitamin B-1 in the water.

Any really super-doopers among your polyanthus plants may be pulled apart first into individual crowns, thereby giving a higher proportion of first-class plants in next spring's display.

Dalton Degenerates

Our neighbors the Daltons have returned quietly and prematurely from New Zealand. Dalton is on sabattical from his university and they had expected to winter in New Zealand, the winter there occurring in our summertime. Dalton was gong to do some field work on the apteryx.

★ ★ ★

So I was surprised when the phone rang and it was Mrs. Dalton.

"Where are you?" I asked, thinking she might be calling from Auckland.

"Right here," she said. "We're home."

I asked them to come over for a drink.

"Something's gone wrong," I told my wife. "They're back."

★ ★ ★

I imagined that whatever it was, Dalton must be quite disappointed. He's an amateur ornithologist, as I am, and was hoping to get into the back country of New Zealand and actually see the apteryx in its habitat.

The apteryx, also known as the Kiwi, is among the rarest and most curious of birds, and would be a prize on anybody's list of sightings.

After we all had a drink and got the greetings over with, the story began to come out. They had fallen under the spell of the South Seas, like so many voyagers before them.

Something crucial had happened to Dalton, evidently, at Pago Pago. He had been sapped of his moral fortitude, like the Rev. Mr. Davidson in Rain.

★ ★ ★

"Did you see the little hotel," I asked him, "where Davidson and Sadie Thompson stayed?" I remembered the hotel as a two-storey frame structure painted green, with a veranda and shuttered windows and bougainvillea on the roof.

"It's still there," Dalton said, "but it's a supermarket now."

The Daltons stayed in the new hotel, a highrise put up by one of the airlines.

★ ★ ★

"They've got this little room in the corner called the Sadie Thompson Room," he said, "and the Saturday night we were there they showed Rain, the old one with Joan Crawford and Walter Huston."

"I'd love to see that."

"Couldn't hear a word for the rain. It was raining in the movie and it was raining outdoors. There wasn't anything to do but drink."

★ ★ ★

I wondered if the bay was still as lovely as it had been when I first sailed into it, before the war, and saw it from a porthole, a Gauguin fantasy of dark water, voluptuous flowers, purple mountains vanishing into the raincloud, and brown naked girls bobbing in the water, tearing petals from hibiscus blossoms and singing pagan love songs.

"It's still beautiful," Dalton said, "but it's got three fish canneries now."

★ ★ ★

They liked Tahiti even better. For a week they had virtually gone to seed, staying in a quaint old colonial hotel in Papeete and taking a bus to the beach. Dalton wore a lava lava, or whatever the Tahitians call it.

"Did you see any birds?"

"Birds?"

"You know, rare birds. There's supposed to be lots of rare birds in the South Pacific."

"Oh, I saw a couple of frigates, I think, down at the beach, and some boobies. You see a lot of boobies."

★ ★ ★

"What happened in New Zealand?"

They had gone to Wellington, Auckland and Christchurch, and took a bus to within 1,000 feet of the snow line in the mountains of south island. But it was cold and it rained.

"You didn't see any apteryx?"

"No. You know what happened? The damn things turned out to be nocturnal."

"Well, couldn't you go out after dark and see one?"

"In the rain?"

★ ★ ★

So they had left New Zealand and flown back to Papeete, where Dalton's degeneration was complete.

"I must have shot a thousand feet of film. It's in the soup, but you'll see it, if it takes all summer."

I think I'd rather spend the summer wintering in New Zealand, looking for Kiwis in the rain.

Hairy Stories

Of all the ridiculous "hair" stories I've heard about this year, surely the funniest and saddest is the item about the temple on the Upper East Side of New York, whose congregation voted to discharge its rabbi for having shoulder-length hair and a beard.

Shades of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob! If a rabbi is to be debarred from wearing a beard, the Old Testament turns into a shambles. Why, a beard is the essence of a patriarch, the symbol of a prophet, the insignia of a learned man. In early religious art, even God is depicted with flowing white beard.

★ ★ ★

No doubt the congregation would feel more comfortable with Alan King's parody of a modern rabbi — "Rabbi Chuck," wearing chinos and tennis sneakers — just as most Christian churches reject the traditional portrait of a Semitic Jesus for a tall, blond, blue-eyed Swedish figure who would be gladly admitted to any club in town, while the true Jesus would be blackballed promptly (they say his parents were Jewish.)

Another absurd and unjust hair story came out of Boston recently, where a municipal judge was hearing a case involving a 22-year-old ex-Marine charged with possession of marijuana.

The judge said he would put the defendant on probation if he consented to cut his hair short; otherwise, he would receive three months in prison. The young man refused to do this, and so the judge put him away.

I think the judge ought to be put away, for arbitrary and despotic misuse of his judical authority and I congratulate the defendant for having the probity to resist this despicable blackmail. He proved himself more honest, principled, and logical than the gallery-playing magistrate.

It is by now a truism that if Jesus returned today, to the U.S., anyway, He would be stopped, searched and probably carted off by the first cop who came across Him.

Bearded, sandalled, beaded, no fixed abode, no occupation, a dropout from school, preaching a nutty gospel of turning the other cheek and giving all you have to the poor — and a notorious frequenter of low places and dubious characters. What chance would He have today? Even less than the Romans gave Him.

★ ★ ★

I am convinced that our anti-hair phobia is in some mysterious, but deeply-fixed, way connected with the Bible and religion; that it serves as an unconscious reminder of the way we have lost, the message we have ignored. Nothing less than this can explain the ugly and irrational rejection and contempt for ancient tresses.

MARILYN BECK

Lest anyone watching Lana Turner make her stage debut in Forty Carats this summer forgets why she was dubbed the original sweater girl, she'll be wearing a clinging slipover knit creation for her getaway number. And, if one outfit isn't enough to convince that those curves remain in all the right places, designer Nolan Miller has whipped up 15 other knockout gowns for Lana's session on the stage.

One, fashioned of clinging jersey, has a plunging neckline to the wast, and is split from hemline to belt, with only a pin holding it all together. And there's a black lace creation festooned with gold sequins which features a plunging halter top. I'm assured that the only thing fake about Lana will be her jewelry. If you look like Lana Turner you can get away with such show-off styles, even at age 50. And she looks absolutely great these days. Her weight is down to 104 pounds, the same as it was when she was first discovered on that drug store stool and turned into a cinema goddess.

All in the family. Marianne Faithful, Mick Jagger's ex, is now being faithful to his kid brother, Chris.

Received a nice note from Elke Sommer, who is getting ready to face the Baron Blood cameras next month. It'll mark the first time that the German pastry has ever made a film in her homeland. Elke, by the way, is still on her anti-Women's Lib bandwagon. She just doesn't know what women are trying to be liberated from.

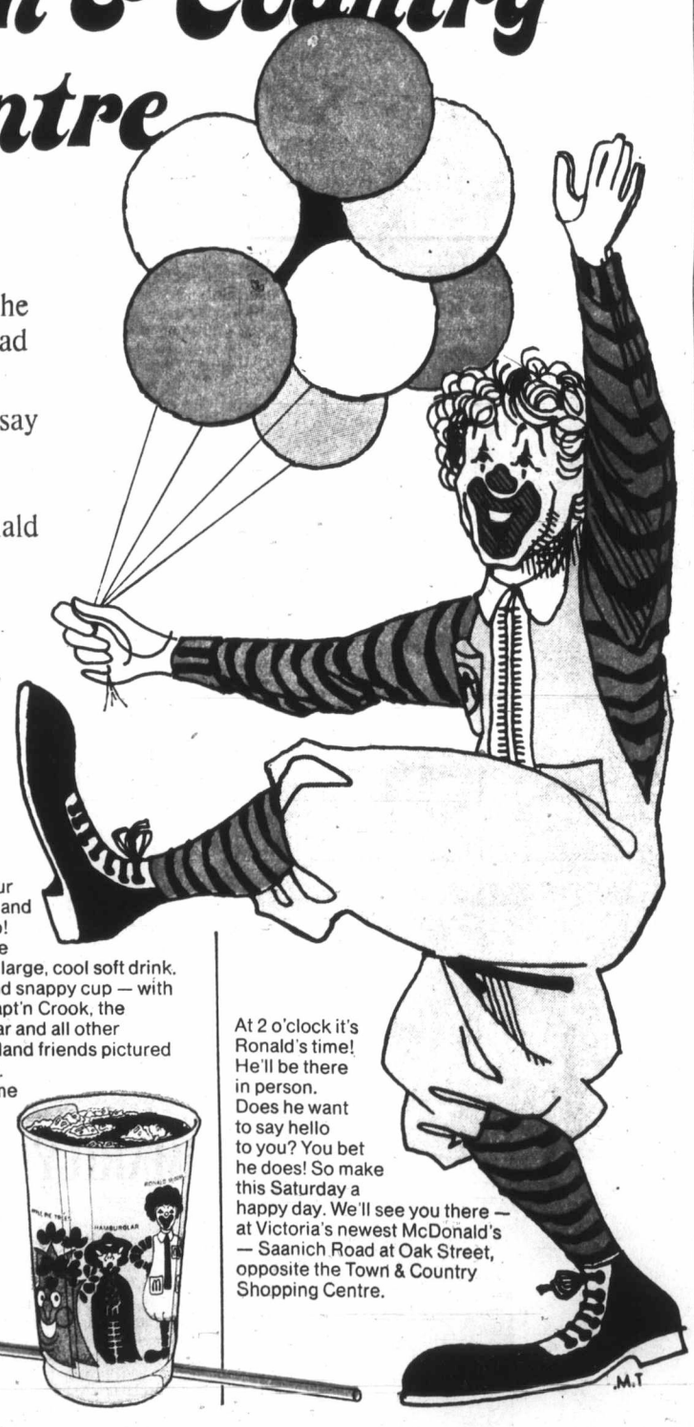

Come along to McDonald's GRAND OPENING

Now on Saanich Road opposite the Town & Country Shopping Centre

This Saturday, join Ronald McDonald and his friends at the Grand Opening of another McDonald's — on Saanich Road across from the Town & Country Shopping Centre.

You've seen Ronald on TV. Now meet him in person and say "hello". You'll find plenty of good food and lots of fun to celebrate the occasion. The Victoria Junior Pipe Band will set the tune. The Mayor will cut the ribbon. And Ronald will have lots of free balloons to give away.

It'll all start at 12:45 pm this Saturday. So come along, bring your friends and join the fun!

THIS SATURDAY

Our doors will swing wide open at 10 in the morning. Mayor Hugh Curtis will officially open McDonald's at 12:45. He'll cut a special ribbon — better be there and see for yourself! It'll be an occasion for the whole family — just as you'd expect it of McDonald's.

Hear them pipe in the fun at 1 o'clock — the great Victoria Junior Pipe Band. 10 Pipers and 6 Drummers strong, there's nothing quite like it!
And with a name like McDonald's, isn't that what you'd expect?

Make sure you get your McDonaldland Happy Cup!
There's one with every large, cool soft drink. A bright and snappy cup — with Ronald, Capt'n Crook, the Hamburglar and all other McDonaldland friends pictured on the cup.
Take it home and use it again and again!

At 2 o'clock it's Ronald's time! He'll be there in person. Does he want to say hello to you? You bet he does! So make this Saturday a happy day. We'll see you there — at Victoria's newest McDonald's — Saanich Road at Oak Street, opposite the Town & Country Shopping Centre.

You deserve a break today

Brother Takes GI's Place

He Saluted, Said Sir, 'Acted Stupid'

SAIGON (UPI) — "I didn't have any trouble playing the role of the soldier. I just saluted when everyone else did, ended every sentence with 'Sir' and acted stupid the rest of the time."

That's the way Wesley Storer, civilian from Yarmouth, Maine, described his brief experience with the infantry in Vietnam while he pretended to be his younger brother, Cpec. 4 Glen Storer.

Wesley, 22, told how his brother, 21, while on home leave after serving with the Americal Division in Chu Lai, said he didn't want to go back to "this needless killing and playing with people's lives."

So Wes, a ski instructor, decided to take the place of Glenn, a draftee, to finish out the last six moths of his service in Vietnam. He said they looked alike and armed with his brother's identification papers and a sheaf of brotherly instructions, he flew to Saigon April 22. Three days later he was settled in with Glenn's company at the Chu Lai base camp.

All went without incident, he said, until he got ready to go back into the field. Then, he said, "one of the guys turned me in because he said he didn't want me to get shot."

Back in the States, soldier Glenn learned the masquerade was over and turned himself in to the army.

On Wednesday, Wesley Storer was cleared to leave Vietnam.

His brother Glenn is scheduled to fly in from the United States a few hours before Wes leaves, but he will be landing at another airbase.

Seale Trial Testimony Read Again

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — The jury deliberating the modern-conspiracy case against Black Panthers Bobby G. Seale and Mrs. Ericka Huggins Thursday asked to hear the entire testimony of Mrs. Huggins. Court reporter Arthur Moan began reading the 500 pages of testimony shortly after 2 p.m.

The jury also asked to hear again a tape recording made during the Panther interrogation of Alex Rackley, whose murder resulted in the charges against Seale and Mrs. Huggins.

David Dellinger and Jerry Rubin, defendants in the Chicago Seven conspiracy trial, were seated in the spectators' gallery.

Seale, 34, chairman of the Black Panther party, and Mrs. Huggins, 23, a Connecticut Panther Leader, are charged with aiding and abetting in the death of Rackley, 24, whose tortured body was found May 21, 1969, in Middlefield. Rackley allegedly turned police informer against the Panthers.

Maritime Prison Row Triggers Quiet Probe

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — An investigation into a 14-hour disturbance at the Dorchester maximum security penitentiary that began late Wednesday, will be carried out by a senior officer of the penitentiaries service. The findings will not be made public.

Two prisoners suffered minor injuries after they were hit by buckshot during the outbreak involving 232 prisoners. They were treated at the prison infirmary. A third prisoner was in hospital after being involved in a scuffle with other prisoners. There were no reports of injuries to prison guards.

Damage to the penitentiary in this southeastern New Brunswick town of about 1,800 persons was confined to a few smashed windows in the gymnasium.

Ransom For Cross?

OTTAWA (UPI) — A member of Parliament Thursday asked Justice Minister John Turner if it was true that ransom was paid to the kidnappers of British Trade Commissioner James Cross for his release.

Conservative Eldon Woolliams asked Turner if a statement made by Union Nationale leadership candidate Jacques Sauriol about the ransom payment was true, but Turner said he had not heard the statement and would have to look into it.

A spokesman for Turner said later the question would be redirected to the solicitor-general's office as it was "a police matter" and belonged with Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

(In a statement released to news media in Montreal, Sauriol asked "why for instance did the federal government allow Mr. James Cross, the British dipolmat, to be ransomed by his family, to the amount of, we are informed $50,000, of which about $33,000 was delivered to his captors . . ." while government officials "tried to convey the gratuitous impression that the hideout had been discovered by policework?")

Outside the House of Commons, Woolliams said he asked the question because he wanted to know if the government had paid money for the release of Cross, why had it not done the same thing for Quebec labor minister Pierre Laporte, who was kidnapped after Cross and subsequently killed by radical separatists.

"I'd always heard a rumor that there was some ransom paid and that was involved in some of the circumstances around Cross' release," Woolliams said.

Pilotage Bill Advances

OTTAWA (CP) — Government legislation to reorganize Canada's pilotage system received second reading in the Commons Thursday with little debate and was referred to committee for what promises to be lengthy and intensive examination.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said the legislation will increase safety on Canadian waterways and lead to reduced government subsidies to users.

Vote on NATO Cut

Nixon Didn't Use S.A.L.T. as Lever

By DON IRWIN
(Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service)

WASHINGTON — The initiative that led to Thursday's announcement of a formula for conducting Soviet-American Strategic Arms limitation talks was taken Jan. 8 by President Nixon in a letter to Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

A source familiar with the negotiations, which according to the president involved "the highest level of both governments," said the president's letter led to subsequent correspondence. Contents of the president's letter were not disclosed.

The upshot, the source said, was that Nixon knew for 10 days before he announced the apparent break in the S.A.L.T. talks that both sides had agreed to issue a statement, pending concurrence on the text.

On Tuesday, the source said, both capitals accepted noon Thursday as the time for an announcement. This timing could have permitted the White House to leak word of prospective S.A.L.T. progress in an effort to influence the Senate's decision on the Mansfield amendment to cut U.S. troops in Europe. But the source said this was not done.

The administration urgently opposed the amendment, arguing in part that a unilateral cut in U.S. Forces assigned to NATO would remove the incentive for Moscow to negotiate a mutual reduction of the NATO and Warsaw Pact garrisons in central Europe.

The White House lobbying campaign that helped defeat the amendment Wednesday night steered clear of any mention of the coming S.A.L.T. announcement.

The Senate's favorable response to a new Soviet overture for a conference that would take in mutual troop reductions made it clear before the Mansfield amendment's 61-33 defeat that the administration had the votes to beat it without additional ammunition.

But a more compelling argument with the president was said to be a desire to demonstrate to the Russians that he could be trusted as a discreet negotiator, not only on the S.A.L.T. issue, but in other negotiations that presumably include the question of mutual force reduction.

LONDON-PARIS

Eye-to-Eye on Europe's Future

PARIS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath, after hours of secret talks, proclaimed Thursday night that France and Britain are in broad agreement on the future of Europe.

On the central issue of British entry into the European Common Market, Heath expressed belief that the way will shortly be cleared "for a momentous step forward."

Through the day they had conferred on the future organization, aims and role of Europe in the world.

High French sources said France had made a historic shift and was resolved to let Britain join the Common Market. They added some tough issues still have to be ironed out.

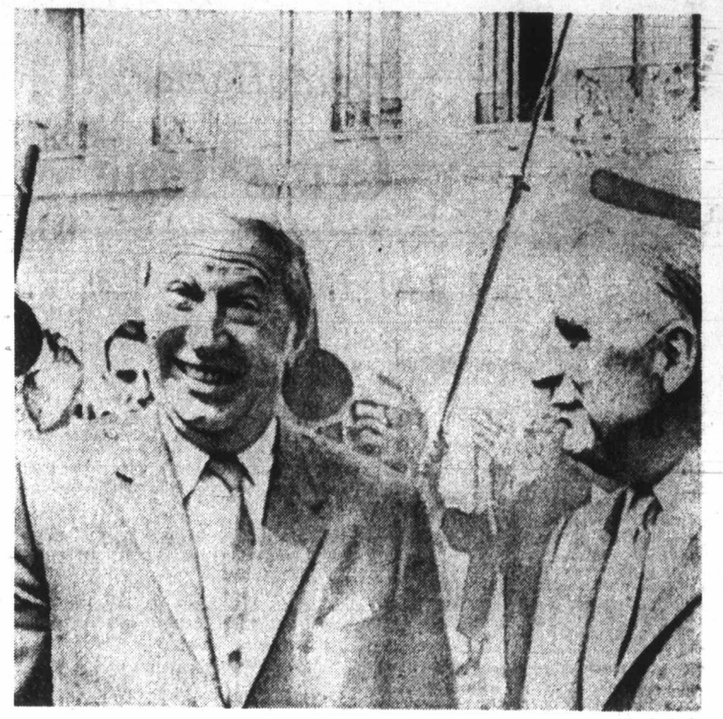

The British were twice barred from membership in the Market by French vetoes in the 1960s.

Pompidou told a glittering banquet of French and British ministers and diplomats that "on many essential points, and particularly concerning the general concept of Europe, its organization and objectives, our views are sufficiently close to allow us to continue without pessimism."

In his response, Heath said it was heartening "for me to discover in my talks with the president how close are our ideas and aspirations."

Both leaders stressed key issues relating to the terms of British entry into an enlarged EEC remain to be settled by negotiators representing the six member states and the four applicant countries. The six are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. The applicants are Britain, Norway, Denmark and Ireland. They are due to meet next

Colonist-Los Angles Times Service

● Nixon didn't use S.A.L.T. news to sway NATO Cut vote. Page 42.

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union Thursday announced a highly promising advance toward curbing nuclear arms, joining in a "declaration of intent" to agree to limit defensive missiles and some offensive strategic weapons.

President Nixon went on national television — while a similar statement was being made in Moscow — to disclose to Americans this "major step in breaking the stalemate on nuclear arms talks." He cautioned, however, that "intensive negotiations" remain before the new understanding is translated into a concrete agreement.

The Soviet-American statement can nonetheless be viewed as half-way toward a deal since, as Nixon said, it "expresses the commitment of the Soviet and American governments at the highest level to achieve this goal."

Should the great expectations raised by the two nations be crushed for some reason, the recriminations that would follow could easily usher in a new cold war.

Among the subjects that will be intensively pursued now at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (S.A.L.T.), major ones will be which offensive weapons systems to limit and by how much, as well as how to restrict anti-ballistic missiles (ABM's) and their ancillary radar.

Despite the formidable problems these questions involve, White House officials said they hoped for a full-scale agreement this year.

"If we succeed," the president said, "This joint statement that has been issued today may well be remembered as the beginning of a new era."

In effect, the declaration was a political decision to expedite the 19-month-old S.A.L.T. discussions by narrowing their focus to those particular weapons systems on which agreement seems most easily reached. Neither side will give up basic principles, but the more difficult issues will be left to subsequent negotiations.

Goyer Warns Against Prison Riots:

Behave, or No Penal Reform

● Results of probe into Maritime prison row won't be made public. Page 40.

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday he is not going to reform Canada's penal system if prisoners don't behave responsibly.

The minister spoke to reporters after having been under fire in the Commons following an overnight disturbance at Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick.

Meanwhile, Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy told the judicial committee Thursday that 18 prisoners have been transferred from the Millhaven penitentiary in Ontario because "trouble was brewing again."

Of the 18, 11 were sent to Kingston penitentiary and seven to Collins Bay, Faguy added.

Goyer said prisoners wouldn't help their cause by creating disturbances.

Reforms can be introduced in an orderly fashion, he said.

"... I'm not going to take the risk of moving into reform if the inmates are not able to behave like responsible people."

The government's line of action would not be determined by the prisoners, but by the government itself.

In the Commons, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) sought leave, refused by Liberals, to move that the Commons justice committee look into Goyer's role in the recent riot at Kingston penitentiary.

Peters said the inquiry

Trudeau Plumps For Spirit Of Independence

By JOHN BEST

KIEV (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau opened a tour of the Soviet provinces in this Ukrainian capital Thursday after winding up a three-day Moscow visit with a show of international independence.

Trudeau, first Canadian prime minister to visit the Soviet Union, plumped at a Moscow news conference for a free Canadian spirit in foreign affairs and took a whimsical poke at his hosts as a point of emphasis.

The prime minister told reporters the Soviet-Canadian protocol agreement on consultations, signed by Trudeau and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosyign Wednesday, would help Canada formulate its own independent viewpoint on international questions, essential if Canada is to be an "informed participant" in its two major Western alliances.

He said he saw no conflict between the agreement and Canadian membership in the NATO and NORAD alliances.

Regular Consultations

Trudeau said the protocol document, which provides for regular consultations between the two countries on international issues as well as on questions affecting matters of mutual Soviet-Canadian concern, indicates that Canada still pursues its long-standing goal of independence in foreign affairs.

"I see no reason why anyone should worry about it in one direction or the other," he said.

And, polishing up his words with prompt application, the Liberal prime minister said he had not been asked to carry any messages from the Soviet Union to United States leaders concerning military forces levels in Europe, "and if they had asked me I would have said they could peddle their own papers."

In Kiev, the prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau arrived at an airport bedecked with the Canadian and Soviet flags and covered with posters proclaiming in English, French, Russian and Ukrainian:

'Long Live Friendship'

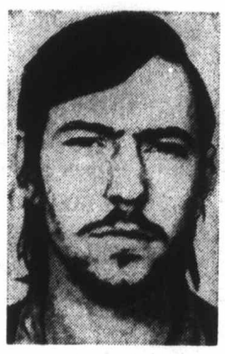

"Long live friendship between the peoples of the Soviet Union and Canada."

The Tass agency said the Canadian party was met by Vladimir Shcherbitsky, chairman of the Ukrainian council of ministers, and other officials. Tass said crowds came to greet Trudeau but gave no estimate of their size.

The prime minister and his wife then left the airport in a motorcycle-escorted motorcade for a drive through the flag-decorated streets of Kiev.

Trudeau is scheduled to continue his 12-day Soviet tour Saturday in Tashkent, the largest city in Soviet Central Asia, then go to Samarkand, Norilsk, Murmansk and Leningrad.

At his Moscow news conference, Trudeau described the Soviet-Canadian agreement as "extremely important and significant."

Simard
. . . 'beautiful Alphonse'

Simard Gets Life Term For Murder of Laporte

MONTREAL (CP) — Francis Simard, 23-year-old student, was sentenced Thursday to life imprisonment after being found guilty of non-capital murder in the strangulation death of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's labor minister at the time.

The 12-man jury returned a guilty verdict after three hours of deliberation.

Simard said nothing when the verdict was brought in and Mr. Justice Alphonse Barbeau pronounced the mandatory life sentence.

But he shouted "beautiful Alphonse" to the judge as he was led from the courtroom, and "we will win" to the audience.

Simard was also given a four-month sentence for contempt of court.

Laporte was murdered last Oct. 17, seven days after being kidnapped by the terrorist Quebec Liberation Front.

Another kidnap victim, British diplomat James Cross, was released unharmed Dec. 4, two months after the abduction.

Also convicted of murder and sentenced to life in the Laporte kidnapping was Paul Rose, a 27-year-old teacher. Two other men are awaiting trial.

Through most of the three-week trial, Simard made few objections to crown evidence and conducted no cross-examination of crown witnesses. It took only 20 minutes to swear in the 12-man jury.

Simard earned his four contempt citations as Barbeau rejected three of his petitions. He asked for better working facilities and permission to sit with three lawyers who were advising but not representing him. He was cited for contempt for a comment he made after it was rejected.

He presented a motion declining the jurisdiction of the court on the grounds it represented a regime installed in Quebec by violence. When an explanation of the rejection of this motion was refused, Simard insulted the judge and earned a second citation.

A third citation came as a motion claiming the jury panel was illegal, discriminatory and unconstitutional was also rejected.

The fourth contempt citation came after he commented:

"This is goddamn fine justice."

Prisoner Gouges Own Eyes

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The son of a prominent Massachusetts legislature counsel gouged out his eyeballs with his fingers in a jail cell Thursday while under the influence of a powerful animal tranquilizer, police said.

Charles Innis Jr., 25, took the tranquilizer sometime before he was found wandering in the nude Wednesday night and arrested, police said.

Lawrence Overby, turnkey at the jail, found Innis after seeing blood on the floor of the cell.

Violence Score: 24-8-75

MONTREAL (CP) — Eight policemen and more than 24 demonstrators were taken to hospital Thursday night following a violent clash at the outset of an anti-war demonstration.

A further 75 demonstrators were in police cells after an attack made on police barriers by persons wielding two-by-fours.

The clash took place shortly after a crowd of between 300 and 500 demonstrators set out for the United States consulate

Harassing In Past Says Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday there is an "understanding" that Canadian fishing vessels will not be harassed again by the U.S. Coast Guard in disputed territory off the Alaska Panhandle.

Canada's Washington embassy delivered a formal note of protest to the U.S. government in Washington Wednesday after the Canadian fishing vessel Anthony J. was chased by a Coast Guard Cutter on Sunday. Sharp was asked by Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) in the Commons whether Canadian patrols would protect Canadian fishermen in the area.

$1.2 Million Awarded In Forest Blaze Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. was awarded $1,213,669 in damages Thursday in a judgment against B.C. hydro and power authority and a provincial highways department foreman.

The award, for damages incurred by a 6,400-acre forest fire on Vancouver Island in 1967, was made by Mr. Justice G. S. Rae of the B.C. Supreme Court following a 45-day trial.

The judge held that Hydro and one of its foremen, Basil Van Horne, was 65 per cent to blame for the fire and department of highways foreman Alex Brayden, 35 per cent.

The court was told the forest fire started Aug. 16, 1967 when highways crews were blasting for a road realignment adjacent to MacMillan Bloedel timber land. It burned until September.

The devastated area was in a five-mile-by-two-mile area on Taylor River in the Sproat Lake district of the Island.

The fire, the judge ruled, was caused when blasting loosened a hydro power line on a pole in the centre of the area being worked, the line hitting special pole guy wires, the ends of which had been left lying in tinder-dry forest bed after being wrapped around stumps.

Rae held that both the Hydro foremen and the highways department foreman were negligent.

Business Licence Apathy Irks

COURTENAY — Concern over "apathy by the business firms in this area in regards to recognizing the necessity of a licence to operate a business in the city," has been expressed by Courtenay licence inspector Barry Anderson.

In his monthly report he said as of May 1, 563 business licences were due and only 206 had been received. There have been 25 licences cancelled he said because of lack of payment.

During April, 12 new licences were taken out by a variety of businesses.

April lagged behind the same month and the same four month period of 1970 in regard to building permits according to the building inspector's report. In April 1971, 16 building permits were issued for a total of $276,750.

The dog pound continues to show increased revenue and for the current year to date, figures released by the superintendent of public works, show total revenue of $1,658 compared to $812 for the same date last year. Twenty seven animal licences were issued last month, 47 dogs were impounded and 39 released.

Fire chief Lawrence Burns reported that schools, hotels, business premises and a mobile home site were inspected during last month. There were 12 fire calls.

The Victoria senior traffic engineer has recommended to Randy Mulcaster, district engineer that a total 24 hour left turn ban at Anderton Avenue and Fifth Street in Courtenay be instituted. The same recommendation recently came from RCMP which included a list of known accidents which occurred at the intersection, just prior to the start of the Courtenay River Bridge.

A local building supply business raised objections saying their business would be adversely affected.

The matter now rests with council for a decision.

The city police reported 186 complaints had been received and investigated and 28 business premises had been found unlocked. The liquor situation was termed as good in April, six bicycles were stolen and four recovered and a total of $2,895 was collected in municipal fines.

Eight Constables Sworn-In Today

Indian Police Force Chosen for Province

Creation of an all-Indian police force in B.C. has drawn favorable reaction from the Indian community on Vancouver Island.

Eight native Indians, ranging in age from 22 to 47 will be sworn in today at the legislative buildings in Victoria by RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham. The force is being formed under the federal Police Act.

Chief Lawrence Lewis of the Cape Mudge band on Quadra Island, said the people on his reserve were in favor of the move.

He told the Colonist Thursday night it was "a step in the right direction."

"Having Indian constables will be particularly good in isolated areas. It will help in policing the reserves, especially today when people are so mobile," said Lewis.

"We are on an island here, and having our own constable will mean we have more control on the reserve."

He explained that after the last run of the ferry at night, it was impossible for an RCMP officer to handle anything that came up on the reserve unless "he had his own boat."

Two Island reserves will have their own constables, with J. A. Wilson being posted to Cape Mudge and L. W. Joe to the Cowichan band near Duncan.

The eight men have come from locations in B.C. as remote as four miles from the Alaska border. Following today's swearing-in, they will undergo a nine-day crash course at the RCMP training academy in Victoria.

They will then spend one month in on-the-job training with the RCMP detachment nearest their home reserve, then will become, in effect, the police chiefs of their reserves.

They will be responsible to their band council and chief.

These pioneers in Indian policing will be the nucleus, and the pilot project for police service that eventually will be extended to most of the major reserves of the province, officials said. The eight will serve a total of 6,400 native people on the reserves.

The program was arranged by Indian Affairs and the federal attorney-general departments, to enforce, not only band bylaws, but the Criminal Code, in conjunction with RCMP in adjacent detachments.

The other six special constables are, C. Shaw, Kitimat; D. M. Wilson, Bella Bella; F. F. Davis, New Aiyansh; D. A. Price, Port Simpson; A. Angus, Greenville; and F. S. Doolan, Kincolith.

Parksville Eyes Tourist Influx

PARKSVILLE — A Parksville tourist bureau will be open for the Victoria Day holiday weekend. Mrs. H. L. S. McCulloch, Miss Ruby Ann Blower, and Miss Cathy Labelle were chosen from about 40 applicants, to staff the bureau. Parksville Chamber of Commerce has made a grant of $2,000 for the project but more support is needed if the bureau is to stay open all summer.

MLA Charges

Ferries Use Bay As Sewer

DUNCAN — B.C. Ferries were using Departure Bay at Nanaimo as a holding tank, charged Cowichan-Malahat MLA, Robert Strachan, Thursday night.

Strachan told a meeting of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC) that Departure Bay was an example of the failure of government pollution policy.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark had urged pleasure boat owners to install holding tanks for sewage on their boats, yet B.C. Ferries were using Departure Bay as their holding tank, he said.

"Their (B.C. government) basic policy is too see how much pollution the water, air, and soil can take." Strachan added: "I think the approach instead should be to establish and maintain clean air, clean water and a good earth."

He was one of two representatives of political parties who attended the meeting at the invitation of SPEC branch president Kurt Horn.

Strachan and Doug Stewart, of the Cowichan-Malahat Liberal Party both disapproved of the provincial government's pollution policy.

Horn told members that he had invited representatives from each of the three major political parties in the area to give society members their views on present government policy and the policy of their own party towards pollution.

"Of the three I invited, only Charles Ennals, the Social Credit representative, was unable to attend," Horn said. He quoted Ennals as saying that the three weeks notice of the meeting was "not sufficient time" to prepare a statement.

Stewart echoed Strachan in the belief that "change will have to come".

He told society members that pollution measures were the top priority of his party.

Two Days Old–But Many Owners

Two-day-old filly of this Arabian mare named Kola came into a good family — all eight members of it. Un-named filly was born Wednesday morning at Maple Bay. His family is that of Mr. and Mrs. John Jestin, who have six children. Filly belongs to all of them. Here, 10-year-old Daryn Jestin admires new addition, who arrived in time for last few weeks of spring. (Elizabeth Dunn).

Indian Municipality First

Cape Mudge Move Formally Approved

The B.C. cabinet Thursday gave formal approval to an agreement with the federal government allowing the Indians of Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to form Canada's first Indian municipality.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said, however, he hasn't yet received any word that the agreement signed by a senior official of the department of Indian affairs has been given federal ministerial approval.

The agreement will form the basis of an incorporation vote which is expected to be taken among Cape Mudge residents sometime this fall. It will have to be approved by a 75 per cent majority.

Youngster Can't Wait

Fishing Derby Alluring

LAKE COWICHAN — Saturday can't come soon enough for nine-year-old Wayne Friesen.

Wayne is one of the youngest contestants in the St. Louis men's fishing derby, which will be held at Lake Cowichan Saturday. His father, Harold Friesen, is the president of the St. Louis Club, a group from the Roman Catholic Church.

"The derby started in 1959 as an activity to raise funds for the church, and since that time it has become one of the main sporting events here," explained Friesen.

It is one of three fishing derbys held annually, and is solely for trout. The derby is open to all fishermen, the only stipulation being that they must weigh in their catch between 5 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Weigh-in points are located at the Lake Cowichan Village wharf, the Cedar Resort, Ben's Marina (Youbou), Caycuse, Gordon Bay government campsite, and Ashburton Beach.

"Over the last 12 years the weatherman has been extremely co-operative — we have always had sunny weather and this year's forecast seems to hold true to the rule," added Fred Oz, a member of the derby committee.

Neither Oz or Friesen will participate in the derby themselves "but I sure wouldn't mind winning a few of the hidden weight prizes," said Friesen. These include over 20 items donated by Lake Cowichan and Duncan businessmen.

The event, which usually draws about 300 fishermen, will have an added feature this year. It is a trophy and prize for the woman angler who brings in the largest fish.

The biggest fish caught to date in the contest was in 1962 when Larry Davis of Lake Cowichan brought in a six-pound 14-ounce fish. The smallest was that of W. Monych of Youbou, who in 1969 caught a 4-pound 15-ounce trout.

Car-Truck Smash Kills One

PARKSVILLE — One man was killed and a female companion was in serious condition in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria Thursday night as a result of a collision with a pickup truck one mile north of Parksville about 5 p.m. Thursday.

Killed was Richard Whitley, 19, of Parksville, driver of a small car.

Qualicum RCMP said the woman was taken to Nanaimo Regional Hospital and transferred at 10:30 p.m. to St. Joseph's Hospital with "serious" injuries.

Malaspina Borrowing Approved by Board

NANAIMO — Nanaimo School Board has given permission to Malaspina College to borrow $360,000 to end equipment leases.

Nanaimo was the last of the five participating school boards to give the necessary permission.

By law, regional colleges cannot make capital expenditures by themselves — they can only lease. When they want to buy they must go to the schools boards that support them and ask for the use of their borrowing power.

The Nanaimo board had earlier refused Malaspina's request, the opposition being led by Trustee Ken Naylor.

Naylor wanted it clearly understood that the college could use $360,000 and no more.

He said he felt "it is the thin edge of the wedge" and that next the college would be going ahead with buildings before going to the people for approval.

Trustee Gordon MacGillivray, the board's representative on the college council, told the board ending the leases would save the taxpayers $65,000 in interest rates that run about 12 per cent.

"This is an interim measure," he said.

"The college is an established institution. We have to accept the fact that it is here."

Vandalism continues to plague Nanaimo schools. It cost $1,500 in April for repairs and replacement of broken glass.

Buildings chairman Joe Kilner said, the cost of vandalism represents a lot of teaching aides and other benefits to students.

The nine break-ins during April all occurred at elementary schools.

Among the items stolen from Cilaire School were a portable radio, stop watch, .22 calibre starting gun and two boxes of .22 blanks, and tins of pop. There were broken windows at seven of the nine schools.

Trustee Mrs. Margaret Fuller said she thought reports from a previous board meeting that teachers and principals could help the situation by making sure to lock windows and doors was an unfair inference and singled out educational staff.

She was commenting on a letter from E. J. Sandland, secretary treasurer of the Elementary Principals and Vice-principals Association protesting the trustee's reprimand.

Sandland said in some instances there have been witnesses to the locking up procedure, yet the next morning a door to the school has been found open.

He asked that some of the blame be shared by people who use schools in the evening and by maintenance crews.

At a previous board meeting Trustee Ed McGougan said he had had reports from maintenance personnel of many cases of doors and windows being left unlocked after classes.

Mrs. Fuller's motion to have a letter sent to principals saying the board did not mean to single them out for criticism was defeated. In its place, the most recent vandalism report will be sent to all teachers and maintenance staff.

Roger Babuin, program supervisor for the Nanaimo Parks and Recreation Commission, reported that a teen dance held at the Nanaimo senior high school May 8 went well.

Trustee Fred White noted that it took 24 men and one dog to supervise the dance that was attended by 253 persons.

"It's a sad commentary that we have to have 24 men and one dog to put on a dance in this town," he said.

Babuin said that in searching young men at the door, eight bottles of beer and several bottles of rye were confiscated.

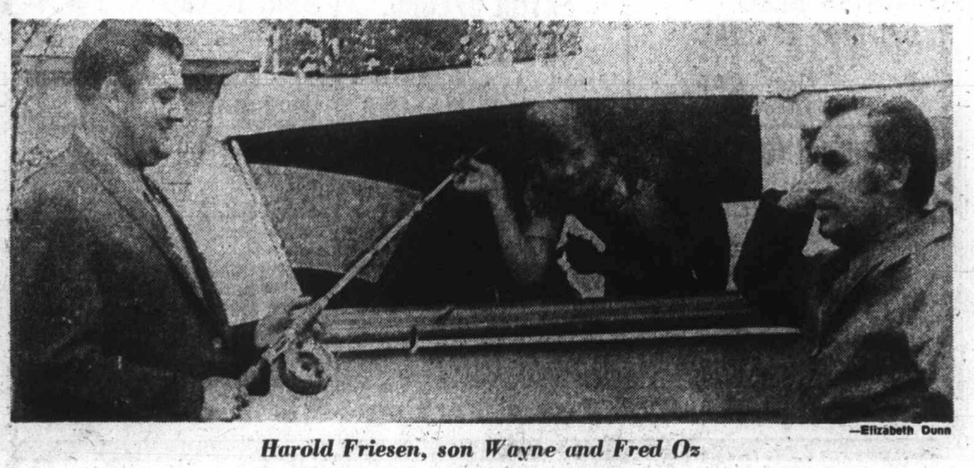

Girls were not searched, but, "Within the ladies washroom afterwards several bottles of beer, wine and rye (empty) were discovered."

He said the problem of liquor being smuggled in has always existed but that the dance was a success and there were no behavior problems.

The board has approved in principle the establishment of a summer youth hostel at the Franklyn Street gymnasium of Quennel school. However, they stipulated that the board has no money to pay for renovations which Nanaimo building inspector Ben Boers has said are necessary for the gym's use as a hostel.

Tuition Grant Wins Favor

NEW FIREHALL SOUGHT

PARKSVILLE — A plea for a quick decision on providing a new firehall was made by a delegation from Parksville Volunteer Fire Department to a regular meeting of the village council.

One complaint voiced about the present fire hall was the lack of space for recreational facilities, which firemen feel should be provided if members are to be on standby duty.

Firemen said the crew and equipment had outgrown the present premises. It is estimated that a new firehall would cost $80,000. Council is considering the matter.

A spokesman for the fire department also raised the subject of medical help in the Parksville area as there is only one resident doctor. The spokesman said that the resulting delay in calling a physician from Qualicum Beach in the event of a heart attack or other emergency might have serious consequences.

Permission was granted Parksville Kinsmen Club to hold Pancake breakfasts during the Parksville Pageant Days in July.

Loggers Sports Attracts Stars

PORT ALBERNI — Fourteen events, with loggers from as far away as Connecticut, Oregon and Washington competing for trophies and $1,000 in cash prizes, will make up the big Loggers Sports Day Saturday at the new Timberbowl in Port Alberni.

Port Alberni Loggers Sports Association, a recently — formed organization devoted to the advancement of sports typical of the forest industry, will sponsor this year's event, which for the past eight years has been sponsored by the Elks Lodge in the area.

Alan Boyko, who demonstrated his axe-throwing skill for the queen and her party earlier this month, is among the many local loggers who have devoted all their free time for weeks in preparation of the Timberbowl and the events. "We want to keep the same big family picnic image for the event," Boyko said.

Because there are logger sports in Nanaimo Sunday and Victoria Monday, the three-day series of events has attracted top champions from many parts of the U.S., as well as the Island and mainland. Included are entries for the underhand chop, the chokerman's race, single-hand-bucking, obstacle - pole - bucking, mens and boy's log birling, axe-throwing, standing-block chop and many more, including the breath-taking tree-climbing events. Two 100-foot poles donated by MacMillan Bloedel are already in place for the latter event.

To encourage local participants, local novice pole-bucking and local novice obstacle-pole-bucking are both new events this year.

From Connecticut, David Greer, five-times world champion log chopper, is expected, while world champion hand-log-bucker Mervin Lentz will be up from Creswell, Ore., as will the Marcellus brothers from Seattle, plus many Canadian challengers, including Bruce Herlihy from Sooke.

MacMillan Bloedel has provided $1,000 in prize money, as well as much of the material used in construction of the park, which is the result of volunteer labor by members of the Loggers Sports Association.

Seattle Leader Expounds

Rotary Gives Man Chance To Serve

COURTENAY — "Rotary is where the common man does the uncommon thing," past district governor Gordon Tongue of Seattle told Courtenay club members at a meeting this week.

Tongue has been in Rotary since 1924, and in addition to being past district governor is past president of the Seattle club, past presidents' representative and a national information counsellor.

He congratulated the Courtenay club for 35 years of club work and told members he wanted to speak briefly on the topic. What Rotary Means to Me Today.

Tongue promoted the thought of international goodwill and peace, the need to understand man's role in an ever-changing society and the need to involve youth in a meaningful way.

"Rotary is where the leaders in the community find a common reason for meeting together," Tongue stated. He suggested service is the key to the successful merging of divergent backgrounds and interests, to a common basis.

"It is in the hands of the common people," he said, "that the future of Courtenay, B.C., and Canada lies."

Youth is an asset of the Courtenay club, he noted, and added that in the next 20 years statistics show the greatest increase in the population will be people in the 20-to-25 age group.

"What do they want," he asked.

In the opinion of the speaker, youth wants an end to the Establishment, an improvement in the environmental scene, speedup of racial equality and a curtailment of military power overseas.

The annual rotary plant-out for the Mile of Flowers at the entrance to the city, will take place June 1 at 7 p.m.

Victoria Granted Harbor Board

By HUBERT BEYER

Victoria has received approval from the federal government to form its own harbor commission, Mayor Courtney Haddock said Wednesday.

But Ottawa's nod may turn out to be nothing but a useless gesture.

Unless the Ogden Point docks are placed under the proposed commission's jurisdiction, the mayor said, there would be no practical purpose to form such a commission in the first place.

Past indications had been that Canadian National Railways, which operate the docks, were not interested in turning jurisdiction over to any harbor commission, he added.

"I hope the federal government will see fit not to renew the (annual) lease for Ogden Point with the CNR," he said.

"Ogden Point is a crucial part of the scheme. Without it, there won't be any commission," he said.

The mayor told the Colonist he had received word Wednesday from David Groos, Liberal MP for Victoria-Oak Bay, that the city may go ahead with its planned harbor commission.

"I'm thrilled about the news. If and when we appoint the commission, all revenue from the city's harbor will stay here instead of going to Ottawa," the mayor said.

Next step, he said, would be to turn the matter over to the city's administrative staff for further consultation with the federal authorities to define exact points of reference for the proposed commission.

It would take several months, Haddock said, before the commission could actually be established.

Meanwhile a CNR official said the federal government's go-ahead for the commission was a complete suprise to him.

"I'm really surprised; this would be a complete reversal of a statement made last week by Transport Minister Don Jamieson that it would probably be another two or three years before a decision will be made with regard to Victoria's harbor commission," said Fred Ritchie, CNR's Ogden Point dock agent.

Objectives

A report, prepared last year by a special committee under chairmanship of Harold Elworthy, listed six main objectives for the proposed commission:

- To undertake a program of efficient and responsible administration of harbor areas within its jurisdiction.
- To control and regulate traffic and activities of vessels within the harbor area.
- To improve and expand existing deep-water berthing, cargo-handling, storage and assembly facilities.
- To promote and develop increased commodity shipment through facilities of the commission.
- To improve and develop new facilities for commercial fishing and pleasure vessels.
- To initiate and encourage improved land use and land development in the harbor area in the best interest of the region's economy.

Labor Seeks Care Control

By DON COLLINS

Victoria Labor Council is launching a petition aimed at provincial government takeover of rest homes and private hospitals.

It will seek to have the 151,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor co-sponsor the petition. (See earlier story Page 47).

Essentially, the move has been prompted by the threat of the B.C. Rest Home Association to evict welfare cases as a result of a financial dispute with the province — a suggestion the council finds distasteful.

Also involved is the failure of National Nursing Homes Ltd. to bargain with the 28 women strikers at Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, who are seeking a first contract.

Labor council president Jack Groves told delegates at Wednesday night's meeting that he had evidence Sandringham, contrary to claims, was a money-making institution.

He said the hospital's assets were listed as $554,000 in 1970 and that its owners had turned down an offer of more than $900,000 as recently as two or three weeks ago from a prospective buyer.

He said the offer was to pay $10,000 a bed and that there are 91 beds in Sandringham.

Questioned after the meeting, Groves said he did not have permission to name the would-be buyer but maintained the offer was "quite legitimate" and that the hospital would have been fully aware of this.

During the meeting he said: "It just goes to show these people (Sandringham owners) are just out to suck more money out of the people of this province in the real lucrative business of taking care of the aged people."

In the petition drafted by the labor council's executive, concern is expressed for the "decline in the operational standards of private hospitals and rest homes in B.C. as now being indicated by the threat of rest home operators to evict patients and, in the case of private hospitals, by the demands of the owners of these institutions for more public funds for welfare patients."

LONDON-PARIS

Eye-to-Eye on Europe's Future

PARIS (AP) — President Georges Pompidou and Prime Minister Edward Heath, after hours of secret talks, proclaimed Thursday night that France and Britain are in broad agreement on the future of Europe.

On the central issue of British entry into the European common market, Heath expressed belief that the way will shortly be cleared "for a momentous step forward."

Through the day they had conferred on the future organization, aims and role of Europe in the world.

High French sources said France had made a historic shift and was resolved to let Britain join the common market. They added some tough issues still have to be ironed out.

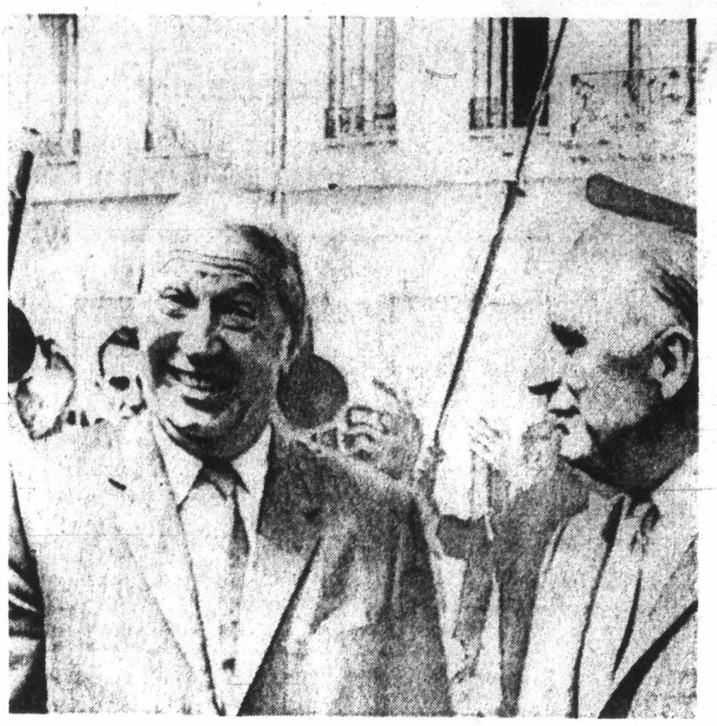

The British were twice barred from membership in the market by French vetoes in the 1960s.

Pompidou told a glittering banquet of French and British ministers and diplomats that "on many essential points, and particularly concerning the general concept of Europe, its organization and objectives, our views are sufficiently close to allow us to continue without pessimism."

In his response, Heath said it was heartening "for me to discover in my talks with the president how close are our ideas and aspirations."

Both leaders stressed key issues relating to the terms of British entry into an enlarged market remain to be settled by negotiators representing the six member states and the four applicant countries. The six are France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. The applicants are Britain, Norway, Denmark and Ireland. They are due to meet next

WASHINGTON-MOSCOW

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

WASHINGTON — The United States and the Soviet Union Thursday announced a highly promising advance toward curbing nuclear arms, joining in a "declaration of intent" to agree to limit defensive missiles and some offensive strategic weapons.

President Nixon went on national television — while a similar statement was being made in Moscow — to disclose to Americans this "major step in breaking the stalemate on nuclear arms talks." He cautioned, however, that "intensive negotiations" remain before the new understanding is translated into a concrete agreement.

The Soviet-American statement can nonetheless be viewed as halfway toward a deal since, as Nixon said, it "expresses the commitment of the Soviet and American governments at the highest level to achieve this goal."

Should the great expectations raised by the two nations be crushed for some reason, the recriminations that would follow could easily usher in a new cold war.

Among the subjects that will be intensively pursued now at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, major ones will be which offensive weapons systems to limit and by how much, as well as how to restrict antiballistic missiles and their ancillary radar.

Despite the formidable problems these questions involve, White House officials said they hoped for a full-scale agreement this year.

"If we succeed," the president said, "this joint statement that has been issued today may well be remembered as the beginning of a new era."

In effect, the declaration was a political decision to expedite the 19-month-old S.A.L.T. discussions by narrowing their focus to those particular weapons systems on which agreement seems most easily reached. Neither side will give up basic principles, but the more difficult issues will be left to subsequent negotiations.

Trudeau Plumps For Spirit Of Independence

By JOHN BEST

KIEV (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau opened a tour of the Soviet provinces in this Ukrainian capital Thursday after winding up a three-day Moscow visit with a show of international independence.

Trudeau, first Canadian prime minister to visit the Soviet Union, plumped at a Moscow news conference for a free Canadian spirit in foreign affairs and took a whimsical poke at his hosts as a point of emphasis.

The prime minister told reporters the Soviet-Canadian protocol agreement on consultations, signed by Trudeau and Soviet Premier Alexei Kosyign Wednesday, would help Canada formulate its own independent viewpoint on international questions, essential if Canada is to be an "informed participant" in its two major Western alliances.

He said he saw no conflict between the agreement and Canadian membership in the NATO and NORAD alliances.

Regular Consultations

Trudeau said the protocol document, which provides for regular consultations between the two countries on international issues as well as on questions affecting matters of mutual Soviet-Canadian concern, indicates that Canada still pursues its long-standing goal of independence in foreign affairs.

"I see no reason why anyone should worry about it in one direction or the other," he said.

And, polishing up his words with prompt application, the Liberal prime minister said he had not been asked to carry any messages from the Soviet Union to United States leaders concerning military forces levels in Europe, "and if they had asked me I would have said they could peddle their own papers."

In Kiev, the prime minister and Mrs. Trudeau arrived at an airport bedecked with the Canadian and Soviet flags and covered with posters proclaiming in English, French, Russian and Ukrainian:

'Long Live Friendship'

"Long live friendship between the peoples of the Soviet Union and Canada."

The Tass agency said the Canadian party was met by Vladimir Sheherbitsky, chairman of the Ukrainian council of ministers, and other officials. Tass said crowds came to greet Trudeau but gave no estimate of their size.

The prime minister and his wife then left the airport in a motorcycle-escorted motorcade for a drive through the flag-decorated streets of Kiev.

Trudeau is scheduled to continue his 12-day Soviet tour Saturday in Tashkent, the largest city in Soviet Central Asia, then go to Samarkand, Norilsk, Murmansk and Leningrad.

At his Moscow news conference, Trudeau described the Soviet-Canadian agreement as "extremely important and significant."

Goyer Warns Against Prison Riots:

Behave, or No Penal Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Thursday he is not going to reform Canada's penal system if prisoners don't behave responsibly.

The minister spoke to reporters after having been under fire in the Commons following an overnight disturbance at Dorchester penitentiary in New Brunswick.

Meanwhile, Penitentiaries Commissioner Paul Faguy told the judicial committee Thursday that 18 prisoners have been transferred from the Millhaven penitentiary in Ontario because "trouble was brewing again."

Of the 18, 11 were sent to Kingston penitentiary and seven to Collins Bay, Faguy added.

Goyer said prisoners wouldn't help their cause by creating disturbances.

Reforms can be introduced in an orderly fashion, he said. "... I'm not going to take the risk of moving into reform if the inmates are not able to behave like responsible people."

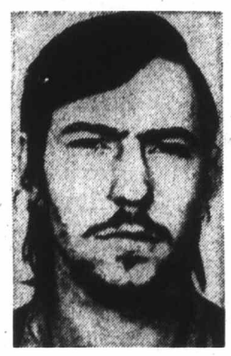

The government's line of action would not be determined by the prisoners, but by the government itself.

In the Commons, Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) sought leave, refused by Liberals, to move that the Commons justice committee look into Goyer's role in the recent riot at Kingston penitentiary.

Peters said the inquiry

Simard Gets Life Term For Murder of Laporte

MONTREAL (CP) — Francis Simard, 23-year-old student, was sentenced Thursday to life imprisonment after being found guilty of non-capital murder in the strangulation death of Pierre Laporte, Quebec's labor minister at the time.

The 12-man jury returned a guilty verdict after three hours of deliberation.

Simard said nothing when the verdict was brought in and Mr. Justice Alphonse Barbeau pronounced the mandatory life sentence.

But he shouted "beautiful Alphonse" to the judge as he was led from the courtroom, and "we will win" to the audience.

Simard was also given a four-month sentence for contempt of court.

Laporte was murdered last Oct. 17, seven days after being kidnapped by the terrorist Quebec Liberation Front.

Another kidnap victim, British diplomat James Cross, was released unharmed Dec. 4, two months after the abduction.

Also convicted of murder and sentenced to life in the Laporte kidnapping was Paul Rose, a 27-year-old teacher. Two other men are awaiting trial.

Through most of the three-week trial, Simard made few objections to crown evidence and conducted no cross-examination of crown witnesses. It took only 20 minutes to swear in the 12-man jury.

Simard earned his four contempt citations as Barbeau rejected three of his petitions. He asked for better working facilities and permission to sit with three lawyers who were advising but not representing him. He was cited for contempt for a comment he made after it was rejected.

He presented a motion declining the jurisdiction of the court on the grounds it represented a regime installed in Quebec by violence. When an explanation of the rejection of this motion was refused, Simard insulted the judge and earned a second citation.

A third citation came as a motion claiming the jury panel was illegal, discriminatory and unconstitutional was also rejected.

The fourth contempt citation came after he commented:

"This is goddamn fine justice."

Harassing In Past Says Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday there is an "understanding" that Canadian fishing vessels will not be harassed again by the U.S. Coast Guard in disputed territory off the Alaska Panhandle.

Canada's Washington embassy delivered a formal note of protest to the U.S. government in Washington Wednesday after the Canadian fishing vessel Anthony J. was chased by a Coast Guard cutter on Sunday. Sharp was asked by Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) in the Commons whether Canadian patrols would protect Canadian fishermen in the area.

Prisoner Gouges Own Eyes

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The son of a prominent Massachusetts legislature counsel gouged out his eyeballs with his fingers in a jail cell Thursday while under the influence of a powerful animal tranquilizer, police said.

Charles Innis Jr., 25, took the tranquilizer sometime before he was found wandering in the nude Wednesday night and arrested, police said.

Lawrence Overby, turnkey at the jail, found Innis after seeing blood on the floor of the cell.

Violence Score: 24-8-75

MONTREAL (CP) — Eight policemen and more than 24 demonstrators were taken to hospital Thursday night following a violent clash at the outset of an anti-war demonstration.

A further 75 demonstrators were in police cells after an attack made on police barriers by persons wielding two-by-fours.

The clash took place shortly after a crowd of between 300 and 500 demonstrators set out for the United States consulate

$1.2 Million Awarded In Forest Blaze Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. was awarded $1,213,669 in damages Thursday in a judgment against B.C. Hydro and Power Authority and a provincial highways department foreman.

The award, for damages incurred by a 6,400-acre forest fire on Vancouver Island in 1967, was made by Mr. Justice G. S. Rae of the B.C. Supreme Court following a 45-day trial.

The judge held that Hydro and one of its foremen, Basil Van Horne, was 65 per cent to blame for the fire and department of highways foreman Alex Brayden, 35 per cent.

The court was told the forest fire started Aug. 16, 1967 when highways crews were blasting for a road realignment adjacent to MacMillan Bloedel timber land. It burned until September.

The devastated area was in a five-mile-by-two-mile area on Taylor River in the Sproat Lake district of the Island.

The fire, the judge ruled, was caused when blasting loosened a Hydro power line on a pole in the centre of the area being worked, the line hitting special pole guy wires, the ends of which had been left lying in tinder dry forest bed after being wrapped around stumps.

Rae held that both the Hydro foremen and the highways department foreman were negligent.

Surprising Switch in Tactics

Putting Welfare Onus on B.C.

Hanrahan

PLOY:
Rest homes guest houses by Monday

Gaglardi

ULTIMATUM:
Take patients, pay bills –or eviction

Rest Home Owners Turn In Licences

By DON COLLINS

Greater Victoria rest home operators were reported turning in their licences Thursday night in a surprising switch of tactics aimed at putting the onus for welfare cases directly on the provincial government.

John Hanrahan of Victoria, vice-president of the B.C. Rest Home Association, said the homes would continue strictly as guest houses and that Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi would be given the ultimatum of removing the welfare people or paying extra money for their keep.

"There will not be any eviction now of welfare guests by the rest homes as had been stated," Hanrahan said after an emergency meeting of association members in Greater Victoria.

"By Monday there will be no more rest homes in Victoria," he said. (This did not include rest homes outside the association and association members who might not agree.)

"The members have been turning in their licences to me tonight and these will be turned over to the association's lawyer."

He said he had 45 licences and that he expected more today, along with some from other Vancouver Island points.

What this means, according to Hanrahan, is this:

In addition to the rest home licences, the operators also have guest house licences from the various municipalities, for which they pay from $36 to $100 a year.

They will retain the guest house licences, which he says, allow them to operate much in the manner of hotels — they can pick whom they want as paying guests, but are not responsible for them.

"Gaglardi will receive a letter from the association lawyer and it will state quite clearly that within 48 hours he must either remove the guests who are welfare recipients or pay the full price of $8 a day for older people and $10 for mental health case," Hanrahan said.

Under questioning, he said it was not likely Gaglardi would receive such a letter before Monday or Tuesday. This would mean the 48-hour deadline would not be reached until Wednesday or Thursday.

What happens if Gaglardi refuses to pay any attention to such an ultimatum? Hanrahan was asked.

"There is no other way — he will be bound by law to do so," he said. "If you don't pay your bill at the hotel, what happens? You have to go."

Association members in Greater Victoria had said they would make good their threat to evict the more than 300 welfare residents if the province didn't increase its payment of $150 a month for each case to $185.

Gaglardi had announced $174 would be paid, but the rest home operators said this would only apply in certain cases.

The latest announcement by the association put the finishing touches to a somewhat confusing day in which the operators didn't seem quite clear on what direction they were moving.

It came only about three hours after association president Cliff Wanless, also of Victoria, said the mass eviction would possibly start by today. Earlier in the day he had said it would probably start by next week.

This, however, was prior to the emergency meeting.

Wanless said guests who need the most care — mainly the senile — would be evicted first. All would be transported directly to general hospitals which he said were prepared to receive them.

Adding to the confusion was the fact that the Greater Vancouver members of the association had left Victoria entirely on its own as far as eviction threats were concerned. On Wednesday night the Vancouver rest home operators voted unanimously not to evict welfare people.

Later, branch secretary Mrs. Eileen Sumner said: "We decided to go along with everything the Victoria group has been doing, except the eviction of welfare guests.

"Using human lives to gain your ends hardly seems right."

Wanless said Victoria operators were surprised to learn their counterparts in the Vancouver area were being paid from $195 to $205 a month for each welfare resident.

"Here we are in Victoria asking the government for $185 a month and these people are already getting more than that," he said.

In answer to questions, he said it appeared all money being paid in addition to the $150 a month — or $5 a day — was coming from the various Vancouver-area municipalities.

The Greater Victoria municipalities were not paying anything, he said.

But Victoria welfare administrator Alex Davidson said the municipalities pay 15 per cent of the $150 allotted for each welfare case. He did not know of any agreeing to pay any amount beyond this, though.

Questioned about the reason for the emergency meeting and the switch in plans, Hanrahan said:

"Well, to be quite honest, this whole thing has been causing a great deal of upset among the older people in the homes and among their families. We had to bring this thing to a head."

Wilkinson Jail Clash

Inmate Struck By Prisoner

By BRUCE LOWTHER

A 22-year-old Port Alberni man arrested Wednesday morning in Victoria on a charge of robbery with violence, attacked a fellow prisoner that night in Wilkinson Road provincial jail in Saanich, The Daily Colonist learned Thursday.

Information received from a spokesman in Vancouver for the provincial director of corrections and from other sources was that the inmate who was attacked, Russell Michael Amos, 17, of Victoria, was in good condition in St. Joseph's Hospital with minor injuries.

In addition, the person described by the corrections spokesman as the attacker, Norman Edward Ramsey, had been recommended for transfer to Riverview mental hospital on the Lower Mainland.

No Reason

The spokesman said "it would appear" that Ramsey, "who has a mental hsopital history," assaulted Amos by striking him with a metal object shortly after 7:30 p.m. while the two were in the jail infirmary with other inmates and some staff members.

The spokesman said there was "no apparent reason" why Ramsey attacked Amos and added "the assault was quickly broken up by staff and inmate Amos was sent immediately to St. Joseph's Hospital for treatment of a broken rib."

A hospital official said Amos did not have a broken rib and had complained of abdominal pain but there was no injury there. However, he said, Amos did have a slight head injury. He described Amos as being in good condition.

Indications were Amos would be returned soon to the prison. He is there on $6,000 bail awaiting trail in a higher court, expected in the fall, on a charge of attempted murder.

Girl Attacked

The charge was laid after Fiona Fay Boucher, 2, of 643 John, suffered a severe head injury and other injuries after an attack in her home on the night of March 4-5. Amos was committed to the higher court by Judge William Ostler after a two-day preliminary hearing May 12 and 13 in Victoria Provincial Court.

Sources told the Colonist the attack in the jail infirmary happened quickly and was over in less than a minute. They said the metal object was a small, round drainhole cover from the infirmary floor.

The sources indicated Amost was struck on the head at least once.

Ramsey appeared Wednesday afternoon before Ostler to hear a charge that he used violence earlier in the day while he stole a newsman's cash apron and its contents of $11.30 from Leonard Alan Pusey.

A doctor brought forward by prosecutor John Macintyre said he thought Ramsey was mentally ill. Asked by Ostler if he wanted to question the doctor, Ramsey said "yeah" and then, turning to the prosecutor, said twice, "What's your name?"

Macintyre suggested a remand to Wilkinson Road for psychiatric treatment rather than to the Eric Martin Institute, which is the usual court procedure in such cases. It was understood this was done as part of a new policy and this was the first time the policy was used.

No Exam

Ostler agreed, suggesting a two-week remand, and sent Ramsey "for observation" to the custody of the warden at Wilkinson Road until 10 a.m. June 2.

Jail authorities referred questions to the corrections branch office in Vancouver and the spokesman there said the papers sending Ramsey to the jail did not specify a psychiatric examination but simply instructed the warden to hold Ramsey and return him June 2.

The spokesman also said Ramsey was not held in solitary confinement after he reached the jail following the court appearance, and added "Ramsey has been recommended for transfer to the Riverview mental hospital."

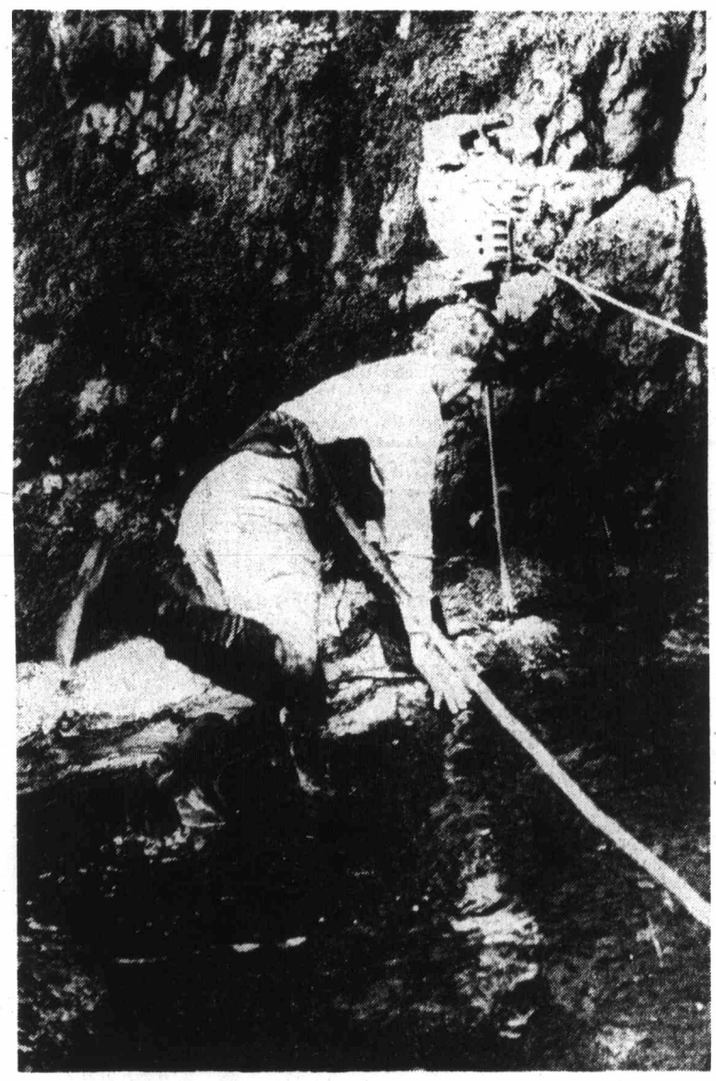

Plans Inquiries

Victoria lawyer Cecil Branson, defence counsel for Amos, said: "The matter disturbs me and I'm going to make further inquiries."

A police report on newspaper street-salesman Pusey, 49, of 67 Menzies, said he was in the waiting area of the Black Ball ticket office on Wharf Street when a man came up, kicked him three times in the groin and left with Pusey's apron.

The report said a suspect was picked up shortly after at Broughton and Langley after Pusey left in a police car.

It said the man at the waiting area grabbed a mailbag from mailman William Bottem, 2089 Byron, as he left the area and later threw it across the road at Fort and Government — and also grabbed a lunchbag from David Geddes, 3395 Weald, in the 500-Block Fort and threw it to the ground.

Scheske inches across lip of high falls

Deadly Goldstream Spot

Falls Fence May Be Up By Weekend

By BROCK KETCHAM

Paul Scheske gets nervous when anyone ventures too close to the top of the Little Niagara Falls precipice in Goldstream provincial park.

Unpleasant memories are revived. Scheske watched a friend, Herbert Otto Hohaus, 32, of West Germany, plunge over the 170-foot cliff last June 8.

Frank Pretula, 28, of Montreal, fell to his death at the same spot April 20.

Thursday night, Scheske, 40, of 955 Furber, Langford, began drilling holes at the top of the cliff with a rented portable rock drill operated by a gas engine.

With equipment and materials supplied by the B.C. parks branch, Scheske will erect a cable fence across the top of the falls.

Scheske's efforts Thursday night are the result of a campaign he began after two sightseers plunged to their deaths in the canyon in less than a year.

He talked over the danger posed by the unprotected drop at the falls with Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan May 12 and Kiernan agreed some kind of protected viewpoint should be provided at the top of the falls.

Scheske, during his campaign for guardrails, said he would be willing to do the work himself if the government would provide the materials.

In an interview at the falls, Scheske said parks director R. H. Ahrens accompanied him to the site Tuesday night to inspect the danger.

While at the top of the precipice, Scheske said Ahrens unkowingly put himself in great danger.

"(Ahrens) was sort of leaning over the edge and could have gone over any time.

"I was sitting at the top and shaking. I didn't want to yell because he might have been startled.

"After he saw the edge of the waterfall with the moss and algae on the rocks, he decided it needed fencing right away. There's only one way to go if you slip, and that's down," he said.

Scheske expects to have the fence completed tonight. Construction of the fence will be simple. Thursday night, he drilled two holes into each side of the top of the canyon. Eyebolt drift pins will be anchored in the holes and two steel cables will be tightly suspended across the lip of the dropoff.

Reason for urgency of the job? Scheske wants the fence completed before the Victoria Day weekend.

"I expect a lot of people will be going through the area then.

"Most people don't realize the danger until it's too late. The same happened to my friend. He had never been in the wilderness and was quite excited with its beauty," Scheske said.

Cost of the fence, he figures, will be roughly $270. He is being assisted in the project by his son Gerry Scheske, 16, and two friends — Gary Theil, 40, of 2911 Sooke Road, and Rick Larsen, 15, of 2780 Spencer, Langford.

Municipal Affairs Wins B.C. Safety Award

Workmen's Compensation Board Centennial 1971 Safety award will be presented to the municipal affairs department in Victoria. The department completed more than 650,000 accident-free man hours from August 1, 1962 to January 31, 1971.

Store's Loss Heavy

Clothing which Victoria police said was worth more than $12,000 was stolen overnight Wednesday in a break-in at the White House men's wear store at 852 Fort.

Police said the thieves gained entry by punching a hole 12 inches wide and 12 inches long in a gyproc wall covering a window, then smashing the window.

Most of the loss was in suits, including 15 worth $145 each, 34 worth $135 each and 14 worth $125 each for a total of $8,515.

Police also said $60 was stolen from a cashbox after a safe was opened overnight Wednesday in the offices of The Victorian weekly newspaper at 1826 Government.

City Starts Agreements To Prevent Speculation

The practice of taking a developer's proposals at face value went out the window Thursday at Victoria city hall.

To eliminate the possibility of land speculation, the city's lands committee recommended to council that the developer of a proposed $3.1 million project for downtown Victoria be required to enter into a special agreement with the city.

The project in question is to consist of an 18-storey, 178-foot hotel tower containing approximately 200 rooms, an interior shopping mall connecting Government with Wharf, a landscaped outdoor plaza and an indoor swimming pool.

Proposed by the Nordal family of Victoria and a group of local businessmen, the project is to be located on the property bounded by Government, Wharf, Broughton and Courtney.

Plans necessitate the closing of Langley between Broughton and Courtney and the developer is in the process of purchasing that piece of land from the city.

This enables the city to place special covenants on the city-owned property.

If passed by city council (the developer has already agreed to the terms), the agreement would:

- Compel the developer to start construction of "a project valued at no less than $3 million" within three years after the closure of Langley.
- Force the developer to resell that portion of Langley to the city for the same price he paid (approximately $25,000).
